HOUSE AGAIN PASSES TEEN-AGE DRAFT BILL

Training Period Proposal Requiring Year's Training Is Deleted from Message

Provision Made for Deferment of Essential Farm Workers and High School Students; Men Who Have Passed Forty-fifth Birthday Would Be Exempt; Compromise Is Passed Quickly.

By WILLIAM F. ARBOGAST
WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP)—Backing up the War Department, the House overwhelmingly gave its final approval today to teen-age draft legislation stripped of a proposal that would have required at least a year of training before 18 and 19-year old draftees could be sent into combat.

On a voice vote it approved and sent to the Senate for expected acceptance Thursday a compromise worked out by a Senate-House committee after the two branches had split on the training requirement originally written into the legislation by the Senate.

The compromise, intended to break a deadlock of almost a month's duration, left in the legislation provisions for the deferment of essential farm workers and high school students and for the exemption from the draft of men who have passed their forty-fifth birthday, provided they do not wish to be drafted.

It eliminated an original House proposal that would have put drafting on a statewide instead of a local board basis. This section had been written into the bill by the House to prevent married men within the jurisdiction of one board from being drafted while there were available men in the reserve pools of other boards in the same state.

The conferees struck it out at the request of the War department. The compromise version provided that high school students 18 or 19 years of age may obtain deferment if they are called for induction during the last half of a school year, the deferment to expire at the end of the academic year.

The original House bill gave deferment until next July 1 to all teen-age students, whether in high school or college.

Before voting on the compromise, the House defeated 189 to 40 on a standing vote, a motion by Representative Rankin (D-Miss.) to recommit the measure with instructions to the conferees to write in a requirement for "adequate" training for teen-age inductees.

Rankin did not say what would be "adequate" but told the House it would put the army on notice that Congress did not want untrained youths sent into combat.

Motion Rejected Twice
It was the second time in two days that such a motion was rejected, the House having refused yesterday to instruct its conferees to hold out for twelve months of training.

Urging rejection of Rankin's proposal, Majority Leader McCormack of Massachusetts pleaded with the House not to "follow our emotions" but to "follow our calm deliberate" (Continued on Page 2, Col. 3)

German High Command Announces Three Allied Vessels Sunk
By The Associated Press
LONDON, Nov. 10—Reports from France tonight said another powerful fleet of United Nations warships and a great number of merchantmen are gathering at Gibraltar, while throughout European waters and in the Atlantic naval activities were reported on a vast scale.

Where American Forces Push African Drive

Developments in the American drive into North Africa are shown on this map: (1) On the west coast of Morocco, where American forces pushed back the Vichy navy at Casablanca, while landings were made at Agadir, Mogador and Safi; (2) Oran, where landings were made at Agadir, Mogador and Safi; (3) Tunisia, where United States forces hope to pass through Tunisia to strike eastward toward the Axis force under Marshal Rommel retreating from Egypt.

British Army Is Pursuing Nazis' Retreating Troops

Threaten to Wipe Out Tattered Remnants of Axis African Corps

By FRANK L. MARTIN
CAIRO, Nov. 10 (AP)—Britain's grimly pursuing Eighth Army pounded on at the tattered remnants of the Axis Africa corps inside the Libyan border today, threatening to wipe out the last of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's forces even before the Americans could close in on them from the West.

British armor racing to cut off the wildly fleeing Nazis was expected to skirt Halfaya Pass in an effort to pin the survivors against the coast, and tonight it was thought probably the pursuing tanks were roaring along in the vicinity of Tobruk, whence the British were ousted ignominiously in Rommel's push last June.

One body of Nazis, caught perhaps by road blocks as their comrades plunged across into Libya, was being engaged along the coastal road inside Egypt, between Sidi Barrani and the border outpost of Salum, and was certain to be quickly liquidated.

The Allied air force operating from new advance fields has been allowing the enemy no peace as he flees along the coast. A huge enemy convoy on the road between Salum and Capuzzo was bombed to such an extent that the road was blocked for hours, the huge fires preventing the Nazis from even approaching the flames.

Axis fortified areas and positions deep in Libya were being subjected to relentless bombing.

One half-famished officer of the African corps groaned when taken prisoner: "Your planes were too much for us. Now the war is over for us—you win."

Far behind in the Egyptian desert one of the starkest tragedies of the conflict was unfolding as British searching parties rounded up the thousands of hapless Italians who were abandoned without sufficient food and water by their German Allies when Lieut. Gen. B. L. Montgomery's troops first smashed through at El Alamein.

Many were dead, having perished under the blazing African sun. Other pitiful groups who survived the fate of their comrades were bitter at their desertion by the Germans and said that thousands of other abandoned Fascists were wandering in the desert, with little hope of being found alive. All prisoners taken recently have suffered badly from exposure.

Special Eighth Army forces are busy collecting the enormous spoils left behind by the retreating Nazis.

Discussions Ten Months Ago Led To Campaign in North Africa

President Reiterates Old Warning against Extremes of Optimism and Pessimism on War

By RICHARD L. TURNER
WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP)—President Roosevelt revealed today that the North African campaign grew out of discussions that began more than ten months ago, said the invasion was going well, and indicated that it was a forerunner of vaster offensives against the Axis.

At the same time, however, he reiterated an old warning against extremes of optimism and pessimism arising from the day-to-day developments of the war.

Preparation for the new offensive began in the fields, in the factories, the mines, and in conversations with Prime Minister Churchill when he visited Washington at the end of 1941, the president asserted at a press conference.

Roughly, the establishment of a second front followed this time table, he said.

The desirability of an offensive was discussed with Churchill and by the joint staffs of Britain and the United States. Various offensives were considered, particularly the possibility of a large scale frontal attack on the Nazi-held French shore of the English channel.

After this proposal had been weighed in the light of the necessary numbers of men, munitions and ships, it was decided that although it was feasible it could not be undertaken in 1942 with a reasonable chance of success.

When Churchill returned to Washington in early June, the issue had become whether the United Nations should wait and launch a large-scale attack in 1943, or start a smaller offensive elsewhere in 1942.

A good many possible points of attack were considered. By the end of June a final decision was made to attack in North Africa in 1942.

By the end of July, the places to be assaulted, the numbers of needed men, planes, tanks, guns and ships had been determined.

By the end of August the approximate date had been set and the order given for the invasion.

The date, Mr. Roosevelt said, was set without anyone thinking of whether it fell before or after election day. In that connection, and some have claimed that Republican successes would have been limited if the offensive had started before instead of after the election—the president quoted James F. Byrnes, the director of economic stabilization, saying jokingly that Mr. Roosevelt should have set election day a week later, just as he made Thanksgiving a week earlier.

Must Plan Carefully
Throughout the summer and fall, while the preparations were being made, the president said, both he and Mr. Churchill had to take it on the chin when outsiders, ignorant of the military facts, discussed the necessity for a second front.

All the while, he pointed out, the second front had already been determined upon.

In a World war, he went on to say, you can't simply go into a department store and buy a second front—a second front is like a suit of clothes that is tailor-made by experts with no delivery for several months. He thought, he added, that most people had now learned that to be the case.

When hundreds of thousands of lives are involved, he continued, the leadership has to try to condition war operations on what is called a reasonable chance of success. Preparation that begins in the fields and mines is involved. It was necessary to find out what was and would be available in men, munitions and guns, whether some of the original objectives would have to be abandoned.

He was asked whether the Russian government was fully informed of the North African plan and agreed to it. Throughout the months of preparation, Russian leaders and newspapers have called persistently for a second front. Mr. Roosevelt said the newsmen would (Continued on Page 2, Col. 5)

Effective Resistance Is Wiped Out on 500 Miles Of Africa's Coast Line

Casablanca, Chief City of Morocco, Is Fast Crumbling under All-out Naval and Air Assault; American Contingents Believed To Be Well on Their Way to Libya; Admiral Darlan Taken Prisoner

AFRICAN NAVAL BOSS

By The Associated Press
LONDON, Nov. 10 (AP)—United States expeditionary armies wiped out effective resistance along 500 miles of Africa's Western Mediterranean coast today with conquest of Oran, Algeria's second city, and a German report said the Bey of Tunis had granted President Roosevelt's request for the passage of American troops to Axis Libya.

On the Atlantic coast the resistance of Casablanca, chief city of Morocco, was fast crumbling under all-out naval and air assault by United States Rear Admiral H. K. Hewitt's heavy warships and dive-bombers and from American armored columns which had infiltrated the city's Eastern suburbs with tanks.

The Allied command announced that the American naval-air force had "overcome to a large degree the resistance of French naval units along the coast in the Casablanca area." Mainstay of this resistance, the 35,000-ton battleship Jean Bart, was a floating pyre off the Port of Casablanca, and supporting Vichy light forces were wiped out.

Casablanca Barely Holding
Evidently, the City of Casablanca itself was just barely holding out.

Rabat, the normal seat of French power in Morocco, on the coast above Casablanca, evidently was isolated and evacuated by the Vichy commander, Gen. Auguste Nogues.

Hence it appeared that in a matter of hours the United States armies would be in effective control of all French North Africa, save for Eastern Algeria and Tunisia.

American contingents evidently were well on their way to Libya, either through Tunis or around it, although the report of the Bey's acquiescence was received with some reserve here, lest it be merely an attempt to justify the movement of Axis troops into Tunisia.

Time and time again today, Vichy's radio insisted that "all is calm" in Eastern and Central Algeria and Tunisia. Some broadcasts, however, reported fighting at Bida, twenty-five miles inland from Algiers.

Deep in the desert from conquered Algiers, American columns were reported striking southeast on a straight line toward Axis Tripoli, intending to by-pass the main defenses of Tunisia and deal finally with the German-Italian enemy in Africa.

The chief of all the Vichy armed forces, Admiral Jean Darlan, was definitely a prisoner on General (Continued on Page 8, Col. 1)

Tire Registration Will Be By Mail In Maryland

Will Begin Saturday and Last Through Sunday November 22

BALTIMORE, Nov. 10 (AP)—Tire registration under the new basic "mileage rationing" program will be held in Maryland by mail beginning Saturday and lasting through November 22, the State OPA office announced today.

The registration forms will be available at all gasoline stations and tire inspection stations, and no forms will be distributed by rationing boards. All forms are to be returned to the nearest local war price and rationing board by Nov. 22.

However, the OPA said that a special arrangement had been made for war workers to receive the forms. Employees of defense plants and other large industries will obtain the forms at their places of employment as in the application for supplementary gasoline rations.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Nov. 10 (AP)—United States air forces under Brig. Gen. James H. Doolittle, operating from four captured airfields, aided in the capture of the strategic port and naval base of Oran today.

The airmen gave air cover to a

British naval force under Commodore T. H. Troubridge, a direct descendant of one of Nelson's captains, who hammered the port from the sea side.

"We have started a vigorous attack to end resistance," a headquarters spokesman said soon after the attack began at 7:30 a. m.

Assault tanks soon infiltrated into the outskirts of the town.

These tanks, supporting the combat forces of Maj. Gen. Lloyd R. Fredendall, started their simultaneous attack from the East and West. One launched its drive from near Cape Nero El Kibir on the West and (Continued on Page 8, Col. 4)

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia, Wednesday, Nov. 11 (AP)—The battle for Oivi, fifty-five miles from the Northeastern New Guinea coast, between Japanese and Allied ground forces now is approaching the decisive stage, the high command announced today.

Heavy fighting is in progress at Oivi where the Japs elected to make a stand after having retreated since Sept. 29 from the point of their farthest advance across the Owen Stanley Mountains upon Port Moresby. Since Nov. 3, the Allied forces have been close to Oivi, encountering stiff resistance on a scale they had not faced since the Japs began backtracking, called upon their planes and tried encircling and infiltration tactics to crack the Japanese defenses.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti, Nov. 10 (AP)—The Haitian foreign office announced tonight that it had severed diplomatic relations with the Axis powers.

Allies Must Make Speedy Expansion In North Africa

Is Essential to Grand Strategy in Mediterranean, Simpson Says

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Speedy expansion eastward of American footholds in French North Africa seems essential to the success of Allied grand strategy in the Mediterranean. Therefore reports from Vichy yesterday that the march on Tunisia was already in progress were credible even before confirmation was available from London or Washington.

A delay for any reason which permitted Axis intervention between the American and British forces in Africa could prove costly. It cannot be doubted, therefore, that General Eisenhower's major concern at the moment is to reach commanding positions on the shores of the Gulf of Tunis without a moment's delay.

That broad and deep indentation in the African coast, embraced by Cape Blanc on the West and Cape Bon on the East, is of critical importance. The short route to it is down the coastal highway from Algiers to Bizerte, a distance of some 400 miles. An alternative route via the Casablanca-Tunis trunk railway lies an average distance of fifty to seventy-five miles inshore.

Bizerte is the main French naval base site in Tunisia. It lies just Southeastward of Cape Blanc at the Western portal of the Gulf of Tunis and is approximately 150 miles from the Western tip of Sicily and about the same distance due South of the big Italian island of Sardinia. Bombers of the British Cairo command have already been striking at Cagliari on the South coast of Sardinia in operations synchronized with American operations in Algeria.

There seems to be no doubt that any Axis counter move in the Western Mediterranean aimed at preventing a British-American junction in Africa must be pointed at Bizerte and the Gulf of Tunis. Cape Bon, Eastern portal of the gulf, is less than 100 miles from the Sicilian coast. If an Axis attempt to throw troops ashore in Tunisia to balk the Allied design is in progress or impending, as a reported Hitler-Mussolini-Laval conference suggests, a critical clash is likely to come to a head swiftly in Northern Tunisia. Control of the Gulf of Tunis must be the prize at stake.

For that reason, one must take with a grain of salt the reports from Vichy that American troops are already surging Southeastward from Algiers in an effort to bypass Tunisia, to reach Italian Libya and its capital, Tripoli, and thus to menace Rommel's retreating army in Eastern Libya from the rear. They will be pushing in that direction toward Bou Saada, 120 miles inland from captured Algiers; but control and use of the Algiers-Tunis stretch of the French North African trunk line is their more realistic objective. It would give Eisenhower an interior route, paralleling the coastal highway, along which to speed his forces swiftly eastward into Tunisia.

It appears possible that further American landing operations on the Mediterranean coast at Philippeville, half way between Algiers and Bizerte, are in progress. With air power based on Algiers and with British-American naval forces sheltering any coastal advance from Axis air or sea attack, it would seem to be possible to extend the American thrust eastward to the Tunisian hump at a rapid pace, and speed is vitally essential.

An accompanying inshore eastward drive along the Algiers-Tunis railway to cut Vichy French defenders of coastal positions off from the rear would enhance the prospects of seizing the Tunisian hump quickly. Once that bridgehead across the narrow Mediterranean waistline was secured against enemy use, the business of moving on from Tunisia into Western Libya to meet the advancing British and complete the entrapment and destruction of Axis forces in Africa could proceed.

That is a distant objective, however, while a quick seizure of the Northern Tunisian promontory to project his front flank would appear to be an immediate necessity for General Eisenhower. How quickly it can be accomplished must depend very largely upon the degree of French resistance encountered in the coastal advance. French war-craft and coastal defenses have presented the most serious opposition to the American occupation.

However, with Admiral Darlan, No. 2-man-designate in the Vichy regime, in American "custody" in North Africa, it seems possible that the backbone of French naval resistance will soon be broken.

Cuban President Will Visit This Country Dec. 8

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP)—President Fulgencio Batista of Cuba will arrive in Washington December 8, the State department announced tonight, to confer with President Roosevelt and later to visit various American cities.

General Batista is making the trip on the invitation of President Roosevelt and while here will be the guest of the government.

He is expected to remain in Washington for several days before beginning his tour of the country. The Navy needs 7,000 college seniors and 7,000 juniors as future officers.

British Laborite Pleads for Unity

Bryn Roberts Addresses Annual Convention of CIO at Boston

By JOE LOFTUS

BOSTON, Nov. 10 (AP)—The CIO annual convention today heard Bryn Roberts, British labor leader, solemnly declare that if the war-forged Anglo-Russian labor unity history might have been different, Roberts eloquently pleaded, amid noisy ovations, for an extension of that understanding to all the United Nations, regardless of differences in social systems.

Expressing hope for labor unity in the United States, he said he found the CIO and AFL "had more in common and they had in conflict."

The convention also adopted resolutions condemning "the disruptive and appeaser line pursued by certain sections of the press and the radio," calling for immediate adoption of anti-poll tax legislation; denouncing discriminatory employment practices; and pledging a continued fight for the preservation of civil liberties, particularly in the South.

Earlier in the day, the delegates gave a rousing reception to Ralph A. Bard, assistant secretary of the navy, who suggested that both management and labor yield some ground in the interest of a more cooperative relationship and a consequent increase in production.

President Philip Murray extended to Bard the CIO's compliments for the friendly relations between labor and the navy.

Roosevelt Will Honor Unknown Soldier Today

President and Pershing To Lead Nation in Armistice Celebration

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP)—President Roosevelt and Gen. John J. Pershing will lead the nation in observance of its first wartime Armistice day tomorrow in traditional ceremonies at Arlington National cemetery.

With American forces again engaged in combat, this time on two widely separated fronts, the chief executive has called upon the nation to dedicate itself to the task of "winning this war and building a just peace."

Accompanied by Gen. Pershing, who commanded the American Expeditionary Forces in the last war, Mr. Roosevelt will place a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier and then make a brief address in the nearby amphitheater at Arlington which will be broadcast. Today that Gen. Pershing's acceptance of his invitation to participate in the ceremonies had made him very happy.

Most of official Washington will observe the traditional two-minute silence at 11 a. m. on the job, although banks will be closed and some Washington offices will maintain skeleton staffs.

The ceremonies at the Arlington amphitheater will include addresses by Roane Waring, national commander of the American Legion, and Mrs. Alfred J. Mathebat, national president of the Legion auxiliary. Miss Lucy Monroe, well known soprano, will sing "The Star Spangled Banner."

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal bishop of Washington, will speak at memorial services for Woodrow Wilson, last wartime president, and a representative of President Roosevelt will place a wreath on Wilson's tomb in the national cathedral.

Edgar Foster, ten-year-old grandson of Joseph Daniels, Wilson's secretary of the navy, also will place a wreath on the World War president's last resting place.

Tire Registration

In excess of five, must be sold or given to the government through the Railway Express Agency. Passenger motorists were warned that it would be illegal to use gasoline in their cars after Nov. 22 if they own "idle" tires.

It was decided by the State Office of Price Administration to conduct the entire operation by mail in order to relieve the war price and rationing boards of any additional burden at this time, the announcement said. The boards are in the midst of the fuel oil rationing program, and large numbers of volunteers are busily engaged in processing those applications and tailoring the coupon books at the present time.

"The law requires that the serial numbers are not the raised numbers but are those indented in the sidewalls of the tire. It is not necessary to know the trade names of the tires unless there are no serial numbers on the tires or the serial numbers are worn down so that they cannot be read."

The OPA asked motorists to exercise particular care in filling out the tire registration forms, by making every effort to print legibly and to record the serial numbers clearly. Motorists were further requested not to burden the boards with inquiries about their applications.

Girard Confined To His Baltimore Home by Police

Vichy French Consular Agent Is Being Held Incommunicado

BALTIMORE, Nov. 10 (AP)—Joseph A. Girard, Vichy French consular agent and representative of the French tobacco monopoly, members of his household and Francis A. Hekking, assistant to Girard in the tobacco monopoly, were confined to the agent's home today by FBI and Baltimore police.

All efforts to contact the Vichy representative were unavailing, but FBI officials guarding the home said that "perhaps in a few days when this thing quiets down," French citizens would be allowed to contact the consul.

These officials added that Girard was held incommunicado by order of the State department.

This statement was supported by Michael McDermott, chief of the current information division of the State department, who told the Baltimore Evening Sun, "we're holding Girard and the others incommunicado for a while." McDermott added that "not even French citizens will be permitted to talk to them or see them. How long this will last I can not say."

No Special Action Taken He emphasized, the paper said, that the consular agent was receiving "just the same treatment" as all other Vichy representatives in the United States.

Assistant Secretary of State Breckinridge Long, amplifying McDermott's statement, also said, according to the Evening Sun, that no special action had been taken against Girard that had not been taken against other Vichy officials as a result of the severance of relations between Vichy France and the United States.

Long was quoted, "I can say definitely that we have not taken any special action against Mr. Girard, nor do we, to the best of my knowledge, contemplate any special action. He is being treated according to present State department policy for all Vichy agents, that is all."

Home Heavily Guarded

A heavy Baltimore police and FBI guard was thrown around the home yesterday afternoon, and all persons were refused admittance to the building. Telephones were cut off at both the consulate and the agent's home and telephone company officials who declined to be quoted by name said the action was taken on orders from the FBI.

The Evening Sun also said Long declared, "The State department has many contracts with Mr. Girard. He holds the important post of American representative of the Regie Francaise, the French tobacco monopoly."

A Treasury department official in Washington told the Evening Sun that the Federal government had loaned the French tobacco monopoly through Girard a "considerable" amount of money recently for the purchase of Maryland, Kentucky and Tennessee tobacco.

Confined with Girard, were his wife; four children, three of whom were born in the United States; Girard's mother; Hekking; a nurse, and a maid.

Training Period

Judgment as to what is best for the country." He recalled that the army high command had opposed the training requirement.

Representative Short (R-Mo.) told the House the War department had given assurance that teenage soldiers would not be put under enemy fire "until they are well equipped and adequately trained."

"Let us do nothing to hamper or hamstring the nation's military leaders," Short urged, asserting that the United Nations "are going strong now."

Asked by Representative Rich (R-Pa.) why the United States had found it necessary to draft teenage soldiers when Canada and New Zealand had not done so, Short replied:

"Because we're smarter than they are."

Pleds for Motion

Pleading for support for the rearmament motion, Rankin complained that many youthful soldiers killed in the last war "had practically no training at all," and said General Pershing had complained about that situation. He suggested that professional football teams and government departments could furnish many physically-fit men for the army without resorting to a drop in the draft age.

Congressional leaders predicted the legislation would clear Capitol Hill and be on the president's desk by the end of this week.

Selective Service officials had told Congress the use of teen-age soldiers would make it possible to defer until probably next spring the wholesale induction of married men without children and might save off until 1944 the induction of heads of families. However, they pointed out, married men slated for induction this month and next would not be effected, since draft quotas for those months already are in the process of being filled.

The par-value of foreign dollar bonds held in the United States at the end of 1941 is estimated by the department of Commerce at $3,010,900,000.

East's Fuel Oil Allowances May Be Trimmed More

Transportation Facilities Inadequate To Meet Present Ration

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP)—The War Production Board, it was learned authoritatively tonight, has decided on a further drastic curtailment of fuel oil for the Eastern states this winter.

Although oil already is being rationed in the seventeen state area on the basis of holding interior temperatures to 65 degrees in most cases, the board found that present transportation facilities could not deliver enough oil to fill the allowances.

Whether this basic 65-degree plan will be altered, however, has not been determined, officials said. The board came to the curtailment decision easily but debated two hours without settling on the method.

Nelson To Pick Plan

Instead of forcing colder houses, an official who declined use of his name suggested that the reduction might be made by specific curtailments of other uses. This course made it plain, however, that no decision has been reached on the method of curtailment.

Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the board, finally was given personal authority by the other members to pick a plan. Both Leon Henderson, price administrator who has charge of rationing, and Secretary of the Interior Harold I. Ickes, who is petroleum co-ordinator, offered suggestions.

One possibility that arose was that gasoline rations might be trimmed further to make room on the available transportation facilities for the movement eastward of fuel oil.

Tank Cars Wearing Out However, officials indicated that the major part of the saving probably would have to be made in the deliveries of fuel oil itself.

Nearly all the fuel oil and gasoline now coming to the seventeen Eastern states is moved by railroad tank cars — use of which was inaugurated when Nazi-U-boats started sinking tank ships which formerly supplied the East.

Operating at their full capacity, the railroad cars could not bring in enough petroleum to satisfy the East without rationing.

Now, officials said, some of the tank cars are starting to wear out, and so many cars are in the repair shops every day that petroleum deliveries are falling off.

Gayda Speculates Invasion of Italy

Editor Who Expresses Duce's Views Says "Situation Is Hard"

ROME (FROM ITALIAN BROADCASTS), Nov. 10 (AP)—Virginia Gayda, editor who often expresses the view of Mussolini, speculated publicly today on the prospects of an invasion of Italy by United Nations forces gathering in Africa.

In an editorial in the Giornale D'Italia Gayda said the "situation is hard," but he assured his readers that any effort to get at Europe through Italy is doomed to failure.

This was the first broadcast reaction of the noted editor on the United States invasion of North Africa.

"Whatever may happen in Italy (the United Nations) will break their heads if they try an invasion of what they call Hitler's Europe through the back door," Gayda wrote. "The Mediterranean may be dominated not only from the African North shore, but from the Italian peninsula, and islands bar the way. Italians are far from being disarmed or vanquished."

"The World war has entered a new phase which has its center in the Mediterranean, and the Italian people are called upon to face new trials."

"The situation is hard, but resources and the will to fight have never been greater. The Anglo-Americans already have committed many errors, and may commit a fatal one if they continue being over-optimistic, and persist in their insulting behavior toward the Italian people."

Dudley Impersonates Liners' Tommy Mont In Cavaliers' Drill

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Nov. 10 (AP)—Bill Dudley, Virginia's All-American halfback of last year, returned to the University of Virginia squad today and impersonated Maryland's Tommy Mont, Old Liner quarterback and one of the nation's top passers, as the Cavaliers pushed their workout for Saturday's aerial battle.

Working with the freshman team, Dudley was on the throwing end of the yearling passing attack and came through with many completions. The former Cavalier star came here to spend a couple of days and left tonight for Bluefield to visit his parents.

The Cavalier backfield today consisted of Tabb Gillette, who learned that his passing against Washington and Lee last week set a new national record for the current season, and Eddie Bryant, Eddie Kreick and Billy Rea.

Leaders of Axis And Pierre Laval Go into Huddle

Reported Meeting in Rome May Foreshadow Counter - Stroke

By E. C. DANITL

LONDON, Nov. 10 (AP)—Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini were reported in a huddle with Pierre Laval in Rome tonight, urgently pondering some desperate counter-stroke to offset the smashing American coup in North Africa which exposed all Southern Europe to Allied attack.

The desperation of the situation facing the Axis chieftains and their puppet was emphasized by Prime Minister Churchill's outspoken declaration today that the North African action was only the preliminary to a grand assault upon them.

Official confirmation of the reported Rome meeting was lacking, but the so-called architect of the "new order" had enough problems to justify a conference and a long one.

Vichy Army Chief Captured

Hitler-Mussolini meetings in the past usually have foreshadowed some world-shaking move on their part, but this time the Allies were in the saddle. The Fuehrer and the Duce would have to outdo themselves to come up with anything to surpass the brilliant American maneuver.

Numerous tiny cracks—and some big ones—opened all through the thin underside of Hitler's "New Europe" and the events of the past seventy-two hours were widening them.

Nothing has been heard of Laval since the Berlin radio announced yesterday that he had gone to "an unannounced destination" — which, the broadcast took pains to explain, was not Paris this time.

Admiral Jean Darlan, chief of Vichy's armed forces, was in American custody at Algiers; General Henri Honore Girard has allied himself with the American forces, and Maxime Weyand, former French commander in North Africa, was strangely silent.

It was in that predicament that old Marshal Petain made himself supreme commander of Vichy fighting services, and Laval's name did not figure in any of the flow of radioed words coming out of Vichy.

Where Hitler once turned here, there and everywhere he run roughshod over everybody he now, however, was maneuvering—temporarily at least—against enemies hedging in three sides of his empire instead of two.

Disarmed and ill-fed France, which supposedly was immobilized by the Armistice of 1940, now offers open ports to Allied invaders from the South. The temper of the people is such that Vichy acknowledged arrests were necessary, in many towns.

Hitler might be cooking up a plan to occupy the rest of France in an effort to meet this new Allied challenge in the Mediterranean.

have to assume that our principal fighting Allies were taken into consultation before anything was done.

The invasion was in its preparatory stages, he said, when Prime Minister Churchill visited Moscow. Much interest attached to a report that the president that total future operations were not limited in any way by the present operation, although the United Nations should first of all get firmly established in Africa. The statement seemed to leave a frontal assault on the French coast entirely a 1943 possibility. Mr. Roosevelt would not say what was planned, but remarked that he thought the African campaign and the event which accompanied it had been a pretty good war of nerves.

Messages to the emperor of Morocco, the Bey of Tunisia and the governor-general of Algiers were written three weeks to a month ago. A few days earlier, he made phonograph records of the French language appeals which were broadcast to the French when the Americans landed in Africa.

The recordings, he said, were made in the cabinet room. Two of his top aides, and two special operators who made the transmissions were present. It was done with such secrecy, however, he added that not even his secretary Stephen Early, knew of it at the time.

developed their own humorous slant. To them the Jap who sends over a flight of seaplanes to bomb their positions is "Louis the Louse," the frequent lone submarine that shells them by night is "Oscar the Sub," enemy artillery bombarding them from the jungle to the Southwest is "Pistol Pete" to the ground troops and "Millimeter Pete" to the air-men, and the cruiser - destroyer groups which have landed about 900 men regularly every other night constitute the "Tokio Express."

The Marine general, who arrived in Guadalcanal October 21 to get first hand information on training and equipment needs and left on the twenty-third, described the "Tokyo Express" as consisting usually of a cruiser which carried about 300 troops and four destroyers carrying 150 each. He said that "our troops have accounted for two of these groups."

Montgomery Is Made General for 'Service In the Field'

King George VI today promoted Lieut.-Gen. Bernard Law Montgomery to the rank of general "for service in the field" as commander of the British Eighth Army in its triumph over Rommel in Egypt.

The king also approved the promotion of General Sir Harold Alexander, Montgomery's chief, to the knight of the grand cross of the order of the bath.

Montgomery was made a knight commander of the order of the bath.

Churchill Terms Egyptian Battle Definite Victory

Tells British People He Is Only Lieutenant of Roosevelt

By ROBERT E. BUNELLE

LONDON, Nov. 10 (AP)—In a mood of grim satisfaction over the rout of Axis arms in Egypt, Prime Minister Churchill told the British people today that he was only the "active and ardent" lieutenant of President Roosevelt in the mighty American invasion of Northwest Africa.

"End of Beginning"

With his almost unrivaled genius for turning a phrase, the prime minister veered between caution and genuine optimism as he said: "Now this is not the end, it is not even the beginning of the end. But it is perhaps the end of the beginning."

The address, Churchill's first since the United States landings in North Africa, was given at the lord mayor's dinner at the mansion house.

Describing the Egyptian campaign as "a remarkable and definite victory," he added that "the bright gleam has caught the helmets of our soldiers and armed and cheered all our hearts."

"The Germans have received that measure of fire and steel which they have so often meted out to others."

"They have been beaten by many of the technical apparatus on which they counted to gain domination of the world. Especially is this true in the air, as well as of tanks and of artillery which has come into its own."

The battle of Egypt, he said, "was designed and timed as a prelude and counterpoint to the momentous enterprise undertaken by the United States at the western end of the Mediterranean—an enterprise under United States command and in which our armies, air force and above all our navy are bearing a noble and important share."

President Roosevelt, the prime minister emphasized, "is the author of this mighty undertaking. In all of it I have been his active and ardent lieutenant."

Mean To Hold Own

While disclaiming Britain's intention of acquiring new territory from the war, he made it plain she did not mean to lose any, either. "We mean to hold our own," he said, firmly. "I have not become the king's first minister in order to preside over the liquidation of the British empire."

Promising to follow today's talk soon with a comprehensive report to parliament, he declared that the mark by the president that total future operations were not limited in any way by the present operation, although the United Nations should first of all get firmly established in Africa. The statement seemed to leave a frontal assault on the French coast entirely a 1943 possibility. Mr. Roosevelt would not say what was planned, but remarked that he thought the African campaign and the event which accompanied it had been a pretty good war of nerves.

Darlan Is Ousted

under which Darlan agreed to an armistice at Algiers.

As these strange speculations stirred warring Europe the Daily Mail published a report that "an important announcement" would be made simultaneously in London and Washington some time today.

No authoritative source would confirm whether an announcement of unusual import was in the offing, but it was noted that while it was announced Darlan was captured by American forces, an amplifying statement called him a "guest" of the American commander and emphasized that he was being treated with a dignity commensurate with his achievements and standing as a naval officer.

All this was coupled with reports that French resistance in North Africa is diminishing fast, leading some observers to believe hostilities may cease completely very soon.

Much significance was attached here to the warful comment coming from German sources.

"Something Fishy," Nazis Say

"There is something fishy about the Darlan affair," said the German official news agency in a Berlin broadcast heard here. "He must be regarded as having been removed from his post."

"The disappointment over the let-down by this man, on whose loyalty the marshal and France had counted, is enormous," the German news agency continued.

"In Vichy circles there is no lack of criticism of Darlan's behavior. Darlan turned the North African affair into a personal matter, and used it to achieve a long-nurtured desire for revenge. Obviously he has not been able to forgive Laval, on whose intervention he was turned out of office (the premiership) last April."

Reds Fear Nazis Plan Major Blow At Soviet Lines

Military Operations Dwindle Almost to Skirmish Level

By EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW, Wednesday, Nov. 11 (AP)—Military operations along the Russian front dwindled almost to skirmish level today and foreign observers speculated that the Germans might be re-grouping for a new major blow at the Red lines now holding firmly from the Baltic to the Black sea.

The heaviest engagement yesterday was fought along the Black sea coast northeast of Tuapse but there the invaders struck with relatively light forces and were promptly hurled back, the Russians said.

In Stalingrad there was sharp fighting but in comparison with the masses of troops the Germans were throwing against the Volga stronghold a few weeks ago today's clashes involved little more than heavy patrols and the initiative lay with the defenders.

Official Soviet circles withheld comment on the progressive reduction of action through the past few days but foreign military observers held that it would not be consistent with Nazi military tactics to let their still strong Russian front forces sit idly by while the Soviet strengthens its lines and Axis fortunes deteriorate rapidly in the Mediterranean basin under the impact of America's first big offensive thrust in this hemisphere.

Premier Stalin in his November 6 speech said that the Germans through the summer held the bulk of their forces in the Stalingrad-Orel area with the eventual aim of striking north toward Moscow. It wasn't apparent today whether the Nazis were shifting their strength back toward the Central front for a new drive on the Soviet capital or whether they might be diverting some of their hardened legions to the west to meet the new Allied threat to their rear.

9,700,000 Will

ent 1,000,000 must grow to 1,500,000 and the marine corps and coast guard must be increased from 400,000 to 700,000.

The Manpower commission's Management-Labor Policy committee had earlier issued a report favoring a voluntary, instead of compulsory, system of obtaining men for the factories and farms, and there were indications that the administration was in agreement.

President Roosevelt talked the manpower question over with Democratic congressional leaders, as part of a general discussion of the legislative situation. Rep. McCormack (D-Mass), the administration floor leader, said no decisions were reached and that congressional action in the near future was unlikely.

Voluntary System Planned

He indicated that, in accord with the suggestions of the policy committee, a joint management-labor group, the administration would make every effort to solve the problem of providing men for the war factories, as well as the army, by a voluntary system.

Meanwhile, D. B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, told a Senate investigating committee that the problem could be solved by standardization of working conditions, wages and overtime rate adjustment. He, too, called for a voluntary system.

While opposing compulsory legislation the manpower commission's committee called for a tightening of governmental machinery dealing with the problem. It asked that "government, industry, agriculture and labor" provide "strong leadership, aggressive action and maximum co-operation."

State To Honor Dead of World War One Today

Fewer Parades and More Solemn Note To Mark Ceremonies

(By The Associated Press)

Again engaged in a world-wide struggle for freedom, the Free State of Maryland today (Wednesday), honors its dead of World War One in Armistice day ceremonies.

This first wartime observance of Armistice day will see fewer parades and speeches, with ceremonies generally sounding a more solemn note.

In many cities the observances are being timed so as not to take war workers from their jobs. For that reason, too, many of the ceremonies customary in peacetime are being curtailed.

One feature of the observance in Baltimore city will be a demonstration of some of the weapons now being used by American troops abroad. It will be given at Roosevelt Park by soldiers from Fort George G. Meade. Headquarters of Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding general of the Third Service Command, said the soldiers would demonstrate ground force weapons and their operation.

This Can Wait Until January

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, in asking Congress to pass legislation giving him the authority to suspend the customs, immigration and other laws when they are found to be impeding the war effort, is requesting extremely wide powers, but in view of the vast authority he already possesses under the war emergency act it is probable that his latest request will be granted.

The president no doubt could offer myriad examples to show that peacetime restrictions on the movement of materials, information and persons have hampered the war effort. He could offer myriad examples to show that these restrictions hamper bureaucrats in peacetime as well.

New Dealers say that to ask special legislation in each instance in which it was found that a certain law was impeding the progress of the war would be to add confusion to an already difficult setup. Granting the president full power to suspend any legal barrier when it was found to be a detriment will be seized upon by New Dealers as their traditional way out of the situation.

In deference to American opinion as voiced at the polls on November 3, action on this request should be postponed until the new Congress meets in January. There is no emergency that requires faster action on a request so revolutionary in its implications to the American way of life.

New Dealers say there is the possibility of a food crisis arising in the future that may make it necessary to import large numbers of farm workers quickly to meet certain emergencies. Suspension of the immigration law would permit this to be done, they say. It would also make possible the entrance of vast numbers of other aliens. At any rate, there will be no food emergency before January.

The United States lacks a number of materials needed in war production and laws hampering their importation are held by New Dealers to be a blow to the war effort. Furthermore, they say, other members of the United Nations may be able to speed up their production if it is possible for them to obtain certain materials here without the complication of high mileage in red tape.

This angle, too, can be considered by the new Congress when it meets in January.

One of the things the American people certainly did not vote for on November 3 is more authority for President Roosevelt unless there is such a mess that there is no other way out.

Former Mistakes Corrected Now

IN GOING into French Africa, America did not make the mistakes it made in the Philippines and the Solomons—too little in the case of the Philippines and divided command in the case of the Solomons. Apparently all the reinforcements needed can be unloaded at the bases of operation of the American invading forces. One general is in supreme command of the effort.

While there are always possibilities of surprises in actions of this sort, engaged in thousands of miles from home, Allied strategists think the situation is permanently under control. They are convinced that Hitler and his stinking little ally, Mussolini, are literally shaking in their boots—especially the latter. They are as firmly of the opinion that old Petain and his coterie of aides, who resemble nothing so much as the Franco set-up in Spain and whose aims are of course identical with those of the Franco outfit, are impotent. They profess complete contempt, as does Washington, of the course of Petain and his crew.

Absence of any real resistance by the French at Algiers and several other points is proof that the French people are opposed to Petain, Laval and Hitler. Obviously the Vichy gang had sent the elements in the armed forces that were supposed to be the most like Petain to these spots of possible danger. That they would not fight the Americans with any enthusiasm corroborates the opinion widely held in Allied circles that the great mass of the French awaits only the day of deliverance from everything Petain and Hitler represent. It is difficult to see how any Frenchman whose mind has not been drugged by the influence of the dark ages could feel differently.

War-time Feeding For the Dog

ONE WAY to end concern over the shortage of meat and possible rationing is to transfer the worry to the dog—that is, the effect that the meat shortage and the disappearance of canned dog foods from the market will have on him.

It is the opinion of experts on canine dietetics and veterinarians in New York city that the metropolitan dog eats too heavily in view of his sedentary life. Veterinarians who were consulted in a recent survey believe that the meat shortage will really be a blessing in disguise to city dogs.

One New York veterinarian said that the reduction in the amount of hamburger that will go to the dogs as a result of the decline of their master's voice in ordering meat supplies will really benefit the animals since it will mean more eating of glandular foods, such as liver and kidneys, which are still available in large quantities and are better for the dog. He said that if the amount of food that a dog gets were cut in half the dog probably would be better off, adding that most dogs eat three times the food that they really need.

One dog doctor says that a quarter pound of meat a day is enough for most terriers and a pound and a half will do most Great Danes. Another agreed that many dogs are over-fed and that their tastes in food can be gratified by many excellent substitutes for the scarcer meats. Both agreed there's no truth in the belief that if a dog refuses a certain food it is necessarily bad for him. The dog may not be hungry.

There may be a lesson for man in all this. Many men are said to eat too much in view of their sedentary lives. If dog owners, forced by expediency to improve their dog's diet, fail to improve their own, the time might arrive when many men suffering from malnutrition themselves will be leading dogs that are the portrayal of health.

The Hope Embodied In Armistice Day

ARMISTICE DAY this year, as for several years past, summons the sad thought that cessation of the world struggle twenty-four years ago was accompanied by the high hope of sane and constructive international relations over a long period of time.

Humankind generally anticipated one of those beneficent eras of peace, with which history has been too seldom punctuated, during which the earth's dwellers enjoy their highest standards of living and their longest strides in progress. That hope went glimmering when militarism and totalitarianism were harnessed to docile peoples.

Since Japan went into Manchuria, Mussolini into Ethiopia and Hitler into Austria, the world has encountered disheartening times. The terminal of universal concord, always the highest goal of man, has retreated farther and farther. To reach it at all now great victories must be won on bloody battlefields by the United Nations. Instead of shrinking, the wreckage of war has been reaching out to include more and more nations. That phase is now upon humankind for an indeterminate period.

While attainment of peace this Armistice day seems to be at the end of a weary road of wreckage and sacrifice, the human family has again as its only solace the belief in a final attainment of international sanity. Two great world holocausts within a single generation must be sufficient to call forth man's best talents to extinguish the searing flame of war.

There will be plenty of Christmas toys this year, made of wood, cardboard and other non-critical materials. Santa Claus, the great bringer of happiness, always finds a way.

The Voice of Doom for the Axis is made up of equal parts of the roar of big guns, the scream of bombs, the chatter of machine guns and the whine of bullets.

In Japan months are designated by numerals instead of names. Even the Nipponese who designed their calendar knew their days were numbered.

Lost in a Green Maze

By MARSHALL MASLIN

I was lost in a green maze. . . . Long ago that was, when I was about seven years old, but going on eight.

It was a huge thing, that maze. It covered several acres, I suppose, though it seemed at least a mile square to a little boy lost. Its walls were an evergreen hedge, thick and strong. You were supposed to get to the center somehow and after you reached that spot to find your way out again. It was easier to get out than to get in but I didn't know that. . . . I was lost in that immense green maze and that's all I knew.

I'd started with my grandmother and at first, as I remember, I'd allowed her to hold my hand. But then I grew adventurous and impatient. I ran ahead and lost myself completely. . . . I wandered frantically here and there and got nowhere. . . . Once I heard my grandmother on the other side of the hedge but I could not reach her, nor could she get to me. . . . I could see the blue sky up there, I could see birds flying overhead, but all I could see around me were those thick green walls—and I wanted to cry. Perhaps I remembered the little lost children in the wood who were covered with leaves by the birds. There I was—lost—and I'd probably starve to death in that sweet-smelling green maze in the park.

But at last my grandmother found me and I was very glad and clung to her hand. . . . And the two of us went here and there to the center of maze and rested a while and then found our way out again. It was very exciting.

But just the same I wish she hadn't found me. I wish she'd turned back and left me to find my way out, all by myself. She did because, I suppose, she was afraid the fright would be bad for a small boy. But now I think it would have been better for him to have made his own way out of that frightening maze. That would have given him confidence, made him wiser, taught him a lesson.

Because small boys—and small girls, too—grow older and get into mazes far more difficult than that one. And some are fair enough and some are hideous; some are blossomy and green, but some are thorny and black. And when they are older they have no grandmother to come and find them. Out of those mazes they must make their own way and it's best for a child to learn not to be too frightened when he gets into a maze and doesn't know which way to turn. . . . That lesson will help him . . . later on.

Splendid Planning For Offensive Is Cause of Elation

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—A thrill of satisfaction has swept through the national capital, giving to the whole war personnel a stimulus that is indescribable. Developments in North Africa have furnished an exhilaration which is being reflected throughout the government.

Part of it is due to the release at last of Washington's biggest secret. It was well kept. In a general way the plan for North Africa was known but while anybody could have figured that out by reading the Vichy and Berlin dispatches which have been for the last few days fishing for information, it was impossible for anyone to know the zero hour for the landing or the nature and size of the expedition which was to land in North Africa on both the Mediterranean and the Atlantic coasts.

The plan has long been in the making. It required a stupendous amount of material and a co-ordination of detail which tells the world that the "blitzkrieg" of the German general staff, so highly publicized heretofore, has its rival in the American initiative launched on a wider scale with a long overseas journey and combining at the point of attack sea power, land power and air power.

Nothing of this magnitude has ever been tried before. The suddenness of the maneuver, as well as its comprehensiveness, is a tribute to the genius of the combined chiefs of staff, which is the high command comprising British-American chiefs of army and navy and air forces—a high command that has its headquarters here in Washington.

Notable Personnel

The personnel of that combined chiefs of staff is well worth noting. Gen. Marshall and Adm. King, who have been in broad command of the operations of the army and navy, had the benefit of the counsel of Adm. Leahy, who came back from his post as ambassador to Vichy with a minute knowledge of just what the Mediterranean operation involved. As a former chief of naval operations, he was just the man to send to Vichy. When he returned, he was the very man needed to co-ordinate as between the army and navy and to act as liaison officer between the president and the heads of the army and navy. As chief of staff to the president, he naturally presides at the meetings of the combined chiefs of staff.

It will be noted that Adm. Sir Andrew Cunningham, who has been representing the British navy here on the combined chiefs of staff, is now in command of the British naval forces in and around North Africa.

Consultation Helpful

Here, therefore, was an opportunity to confer in person and plan an operation and then execute it. Gen. Eisenhower, who is the American commander-in-chief in North Africa, had the benefit of many consultations with Gen. Marshall who sent him overseas. Every detail of naval planning was in the hands of Adm. King, commander-in-chief of the United States fleet, who has the unprecedented task of fighting a war in two oceans. On his shoulders is the burden of deciding what strength can be spared for the Atlantic or the Pacific, as each contingency arises.

It is not known how much of America's naval strength is concentrated in North African waters, but it may be assumed that the British navy is bearing a considerable share of the burden of this naval task.

Dangerous Tactics

To synchronize the British and American naval operations, and at the same time to carry on the landing operations with American troops protected by American air power, involved tactics of the most

COMMANDER AT ORAN

Maj. Gen. Frendendall

It was disclosed by the War Department that Major Gen. Lloyd R. Frendendall, 59, of Cheyenne, Wyo., is commander of the American troops that landed on Oran. He served in the World War as a staff assistant to Gen. John J. Pershing in France. American soldiers took the Tafarouir airfield at Oran, adding another air base to the growing American foothold in North Africa.

Invasion of Sicily, Italy and Crete Is Viewed as Next Likely Step by Allies

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The North African venture was won by meticulous planning, which caught the Nazis and Vichy French completely off-guard.

For a few days before the blow fell, the Axis radio had been noting the presence of British warships inside Gibraltar. Braggingly, it gave the names and numbers. Only twenty-four hours in advance did it begin to mention incidentally the presence of an American ship or two.

The Nazis thought the British were going to reinforce Malta, where supplies were known to be running low. Only as an afterthought did they consider the possibility of what was to happen.

The British warships had sailed up in front of the Nazi spies in Spain with flags flying to practice activities, which held Nazi attention while our armada slipped through Gibraltar mostly at night—and mostly undetected.

When Vichy, Rome and Berlin learned the plan, it was too late for them to do much. Reinforcements would have to be organized first, then cross the Mediterranean and, by that time, we were in possession of that sea. A good part of the British fleet was steaming around off the shores of Tunisia and Tripoli to make that even more difficult.

These Charges Need Probing

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligence

Senator Aiken, of Vermont, has charged the Maritime commission with dissipation and misuse of public funds. Some of the transactions, he declares in demanding a congressional investigation, "appear to have gone beyond the realm of dissipation" and actually "smell to high heaven of incompetence and collusion."

Among the specific counts listed by Aiken are the following: That the commission paid outrageous prices for old and obsolete ships; That it paid unwarranted subsidies for construction and operating expenses for foreign competition had virtually ceased;

That it has failed to collect various penalties and charges rightfully coming to the Government;

That it has been a party to transactions whereby it has sold ships to private corporations which in turn sold them to the navy at higher prices;

That it has permitted wilful extravagance, incompetence, and the like.

As a result of all of this, the Vermont Senator charges, "American taxpayers have been robbed of untold millions."

These are indeed, grave charges which should be probed to the bottom with the least possible delay. If any agency of government has even approximated this gross misuse of public funds and public business at a time like this when the country is engaged in a war for its very life and the people are bearing the heaviest burden of taxation in the history of mankind, punishment should be meted out promptly and mercilessly to everyone in any way responsible.

Biggest in History

How big is our expeditionary force? Vichy propaganda reports say about 140,000 men. Certainly the force might well be of that size, judging by the amount of shipping said to be involved. But whether the force is as much as 140,000 or somewhat less, it remains the biggest single expeditionary movement ever landed in one maneuver in naval history anywhere. And the public can rest assured that it is well equipped with tanks, with fighters and bombers, and with plenty of auxiliary vessels and supplies.

The high command has planned effectively, but ahead lies the real challenge—to sustain the forces and carry on the offensive.

When Vichy, Rome and Berlin learned the plan, it was too late for them to do much. Reinforcements would have to be organized first, then cross the Mediterranean and, by that time, we were in possession of that sea. A good part of the British fleet was steaming around off the shores of Tunisia and Tripoli to make that even more difficult.

The Bosphorus is still closed and German occupation of Greece makes that narrow passage unusable.

The rail route up from French Syria goes through Turkey, whose neutrality may now be drawn out our way, but hardly enough to permit passage of war materials to Russia.

The justification for this campaign is the acquisition of bases for our planes and ships to get at the Axis and defeat it. Diplomats may figure out others, but this is the sound military one.

Why Half-Cent Pieces?

From the Charleston, W. Va., Daily Mail

We note with mixed approval and bewilderment that the Treasury is about to coin half-cent pieces.

Our approval stems from the fact that it is good news that the Treasury concerns itself at all with the smaller denomination of the currency. It had been our impression, doubtless unfounded, but strangely persistent, that whenever the Treasury went in for reforms it simply created a new bill to represent on one piece of paper a sum larger than had been necessary before. That it is still thinking about the smaller sums which figure largest in our life is altogether encouraging.

Why the Treasury is acting now, however, is the cause of our bewilderment. To the best of our knowledge there is very little a cent will buy anymore. In these circumstances the uses for a half-cent piece is likely to be severely limited. Once upon a time it would have been handy in paying for gasoline, which for reasons we have never quite understood was always priced in improbable fractions. Now that gasoline is scarce and its use restricted, we don't know what purpose the half penny will serve. We're certain the Treasury will not approve of our holding to it.

Sea and Continent

This success simply means we have, or soon will have, Africa and the Mediterranean—all of both, the whole North African shoreline and everything that lies beneath it and control of the waves of Rome's mare nostrum.

What we do next has not been decided by this step. Common assumption is that we will take Sicily and invade Italy, a move advocated repeatedly for more than a year in this column as the ideal second front.

Sicily is well defended, not by Italians but by Nazis, who have

Revolution Possible

As we get the airfields on the African shore, we may well be able to soften those defenses for seizure, and ride on up the Italian boot, in control of the sea on both sides and the air overhead. Indeed, we might be welcomed by revolution in Italy, as soon as we are ready—or before.

That is only one possibility. We will also have to re-take Crete, when our planes and ships are ready for the job. This is necessary to nullify Nazi bombing efforts around the Suez, and make the Eastern Mediterranean safe for our traffic.

But direct invasion of the continent across the channel is not precluded. Hitler's weakness in men, planes and tanks, which showed up conclusively in the African campaign, makes a channel attack look more feasible. It affords the shortest possible line of supplies.

Russian Rout Difficult

Vice President Wallace, in his Soviet day speech, justified the North African campaign, on the ground that it would open a shorter route of supplies to Russia. All it does in that respect is to cut the long haul around Africa to the Persian gulf, thus lessening the sea route some.

The Bosphorus is still closed and German occupation of Greece makes that narrow passage unusable.

The rail route up from French Syria goes through Turkey, whose neutrality may now be drawn out our way, but hardly enough to permit passage of war materials to Russia.

The justification for this campaign is the acquisition of bases for our planes and ships to get at the Axis and defeat it. Diplomats may figure out others, but this is the sound military one.

Why Half-Cent Pieces?

From the Charleston, W. Va., Daily Mail

We note with mixed approval and bewilderment that the Treasury is about to coin half-cent pieces.

Our approval stems from the fact that it is good news that the Treasury concerns itself at all with the smaller denomination of the currency. It had been our impression, doubtless unfounded, but strangely persistent, that whenever the Treasury went in for reforms it simply created a new bill to represent on one piece of paper a sum larger than had been necessary before. That it is still thinking about the smaller sums which figure largest in our life is altogether encouraging.

Why the Treasury is acting now, however, is the cause of our bewilderment. To the best of our knowledge there is very little a cent will buy anymore. In these circumstances the uses for a half-cent piece is likely to be severely limited. Once upon a time it would have been handy in paying for gasoline, which for reasons we have never quite understood was always priced in improbable fractions. Now that gasoline is scarce and its use restricted, we don't know what purpose the half penny will serve. We're certain the Treasury will not approve of our holding to it.

Sea and Continent

This success simply means we have, or soon will have, Africa and the Mediterranean—all of both, the whole North African shoreline and everything that lies beneath it and control of the waves of Rome's mare nostrum.

What we do next has not been decided by this step. Common assumption is that we will take Sicily and invade Italy, a move advocated repeatedly for more than a year in this column as the ideal second front.

Sicily is well defended, not by Italians but by Nazis, who have

Farm Volunteers For Armed Services Are Spurned Now

By CHARLES P. STEWART

Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON.—That a large number of military eligibles are breaking into the government Civil Service or into various supposedly indispensable industrial jobs, or that they're trying to do so anyway, in order to escape conscription as fighters, is a charge I frequently hear made, and decidedly don't believe in.

It may be true in an occasional case, but, as a general proposition, all indications are exactly contrariwise.

Plenty of capable young farm hands, in particular, want to join our armed forces, who can't get themselves accepted. Their work on the land, providing grub for our uniformed warriors, is more valuable than they'd be as actual scrappers.

Appeals Are Taken

Consequently our manpower commission appealed to our army and navy authorities to reject 'em when they try to enlist. The Treasury Procurement division also was asked to instruct contractors not to employ skilled dairy, livestock and poultry workers without the manpower outfit's approval.

It's a peculiar situation in which an able-bodied, pugnacious lad, with a war available, and anxious to do his share in it, not only is passed up as a conscript, but is turned down as a volunteer, even.

Young farmers, in short, virtually have to be conscripted for farming.

A hand in some war producing factory is in a somewhat different classification.

Good Money Tempting

He makes better money than a farm boy. He probably is no more afraid of being shot at than the country kid is. He's liable to be strongly tempted to stay home, however, on account of financial considerations. Indeed, it's a ground upon which the farm youth may be tempted from his livestock, hens and dairying into city employment. The manpower commission has to bear that in mind and freeze the chap onto the soil for the duration.

Economists are speculating considerably as to what'll happen to agriculture when the conflicts over. They're curious also as to what'll happen to urban labor, but they don't believe that'll be so urgent an issue.

Bothersome Interval

They reckon that urban industry will have a tremendously accumulated demand to meet. It'll have piled up indefinitely while the fight's raged. There doubtless will be a bothersome interval of readjustment while things are getting back to a peacetime basis, but it'll progress as rapidly as the mechanics of it permit. Agriculture, though, it's calculated, will find itself overdone and overmanned. Just how rapidly it'll be able to re-adapt itself to peacetime conditions is a matter of guesswork.

A bird who has been intensively trained in a war machinery plant shouldn't have much difficulty in switching to peace's mechanical technique.

The supply of farm hands, though, may prove to be excessive, and it'll take those guys some little time to acquire mechanical education. Otherwise than agriculturally, they'll have been kept suppressed, and they'll be super-abundant on the industrial labor market.

Just now there's a famine in farm hands.

A New "Normalcy"

Then everybody who's conscripted, at present, into it, will be a shark at it—and no good for anything else, until he's learned a new business.

We talk about the world getting back to normalcy after the war's over.

According to the economists, it'll get back to normalcy, but it'll be an entirely different sort of normalcy from anything we've known hitherto.

They don't profess to know exactly what it'll resemble.

They don't profess to know how folk will like it or not, either.

The next generation will adapt itself. To that epoch it'll seem natural, if not satisfactory.

We few left-overs may consider it pretty tiresome.

There can't be any genuine, general, permanent improvement, though.

God wouldn't have permitted things to have fussed along as they have, up to date, if he'd intended otherwise.

This doubtless is a good thing, somehow.

It certainly wouldn't have been allowed to string out, as it has hitherto, if Infinity had deemed it undesirable.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 10. (AP)—Judge Eugene O'Dunne, re-elected to his post in the recent general election, has filed the following election statement:

New Commander Of A.E.F. Known As Tough Officer

"Takes Guts, Not Machines, To Win Wars," Gen. Patton Says

(By The Associated Press)
Major General George S. Patton, the armored corps commander chosen by the United States high command to direct American landing forces on the African Atlantic coast, is a colorful individualist with a smoking tongue and a will-to-victory belief that it takes "guts, not machines" to win wars.

The general is known far and wide for a mule-skinner's vocabulary. And with all his philosophy of hard work and hard fighting, his men swear by him.

He has packed a lot of action into his thirty-odd years in the army.

He learned to love tanks in the first world war. He knows they are effective but does not overrate them, as he showed by this remark during first armored corps maneuvers in the Southern California desert last May:

Our Tanks Best

"We unquestionably have the best tanks in the world. But this talk that we're going to win the war because we have 'em is bunk. You win wars with guts, not machines, although they are necessary."

Patton collected a number of "firsts" in World War I which he entered as a lieutenant and left as a colonel, only nine years after his graduation from West Point.

Patton was in charge of the headquarters outfit of the first A.E.F. ship to Europe. He was the first officer assigned to an American tank corps, and set up the tank school at Bourges, France.

Since then he has tinkered with tanks and learned how to exact the last full measure of service out of them.

On Dec. 12, 1940, after the German conquests in western Europe had demonstrated the effectiveness of an armored force, a full armored division commanded by General Patton made records in this country.

10,000 Men in Tank Unit
Ten thousand men moved out of Fort Benning, Ga., in a troop exercise which was the first time a full armored division had moved across country in the Western Hemisphere. The 400 tanks in the division were the largest concentration of that type of combat vehicle ever undertaken up to that time in the United States.

General Patton was delighted with that performance, asserting "there is nothing in the world equal to it."

tering at schools, all of which will, doubtless, have long waiting lines. True, such mass registration may be somewhat easier for the local rationing boards, but to our way of thinking it stands to cause some 400,000 motorists in Maryland unwarranted, inexcusable trouble and difficulty.

"Even if motorists are given their registration blanks in advance, experience shows that the majority will go to the schools or other outside registration places with their forms unfilled, knowing someone there will assist them in registering. Many, also, will forget to bring their car registration cards."

"Most important will be the loss of man-hours, the waste of gasoline and the unnecessary use of tires. School registration will require thousands of laborers, business and professional men and women to travel to schools, wait their turn, wait again while the teachers check their applications and so forth."

Tire Registration In Schools Draws Protest by Club

Maryland Organization Wants Work Done by Rationing Boards

BALTIMORE, Nov. 10. (AP)—The Automobile Club of Maryland has lodged a strong protest with Leo H. McCormick, state OPA director, against the possible use of schools for automobile tire registration.

Palmer H. Nickerson, general counsel for the club, said the registration of some 400,000 motorists would be "a needless hardship" and "unwarranted, inexcusable trouble."

He asked McCormick to permit the tire registration by mail or at local rationing boards.

Nickerson pointed out that only the District of Columbia and one or two states were planning school registration, and questioned the necessity of it in Maryland, when "huge New York state is able to do

Program of Child Care Is Outlined By Girl Scouts

New Service Will Be Helpful to Girls and Many Parents Here

A child care program has been inaugurated by the Girl Scout organization in Cumberland in order that Senior scouts can give a new service to the community. The program was outlined this week by a committee including Mrs. K. W. Radcliffe, chairman; Mrs. Milnor Bruce, Mrs. Joseph Miller and Miss Mary Shriver.

Committee members said yesterday the program does not in any way include maid service but that it is expected to be beneficial to the girl scouts as well as parents with small children.

The rules the scouts are expected to follow are, to respect the property of others; not to eat food or use writing paper unless given by the homeowner; not to use the radio without permission; answer the telephone and write the messages down correctly; not to use the telephone for personal calls; to learn to change a diaper; know how to read or tell stories entertainingly; not have company; be careful about answering the door bell and if no one is expected turn on a light before opening the door. If the scout is not permitted out after 10 or 11 o'clock this should be stated beforehand.

Parents are asked never to ask a scout to care for sick children or any who have a communicable disease, however mild; see that pets that don't like strangers are penned up for the evening; arrange the time the scout is wanted and the approximate time she may go home; if staying late suggest the scout stay all night; see the scout gets home safely either by taking her or sending her in a taxi; give the scout the telephone number where both husband and wife can be reached if out separately. The scout should also have information as to how to put the children to bed, their toilet habits, etc.

Club Has Party

The D. and H. Club entertained with a party Friday evening at the Queen City hotel.

Those attending were Mrs. Marie O'Brien, Mrs. Angela Towler, Mrs. Molly Kirtley, Mrs. Elma Carder, Mrs. Margaret Mitchell, Mrs. Bertha McCrorie, Mrs. Gladys Ward, Mrs. Ann Hannawalt, Mrs. Eva Spier, Mrs. Laurine Adams, Mrs. Dorothy Bauer, Mrs. Lottie Richards, Mrs. Nellie Tee.

The Christmas dance for the students of the Ursuline Academy will be held under the sponsorship of the Ursuline Auxiliary. Plans were made at the meeting of the Auxiliary Monday evening in the school and Mrs. Frank Weisenmiller appointed Mrs. Louis Lippold chairman.

Members also planned to assist with the annual parish Thanksgiving supper to be held November 24 and 25, in the parish hall.

Mrs. Arthur Beaulieu resigned her chairmanship of the weekly card parties held by the auxiliary and Mrs. Joseph Becker was appointed chairman for a month.

Approximately thirteen members attended the meeting.

DR. AND MRS. LANICH OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY

Large crystal vases of white chrysanthemums backed with silver leaves elaborately decorated the home of Dr. and Mrs. L. Jackson Lanich, 108 Virginia avenue, for their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary celebrations yesterday.

Mrs. Sara Higgins presided at the punch bowl which was encircled by a garland of silver ivy, similar garlands encircled the chrysanthemum centerpiece on the refreshments table. The small white cakes were also decorated in silver, for the reception last evening.

Mrs. Lanich was attired in a silver lace gown with which she wore a necklace made of the Chinese silver buttons from her wedding dress. Her sister, Mrs. Preston J. Knight, Akron, O., who assisted in receiving, wore a formal white gown.

Mrs. Knight sang "The Sweetest Story Ever Told," with Mrs. Alvin Wilson at the piano, for the members of the Art Kraft Klub who were entertained by Mrs. Lanich at dinner yesterday.

Parents Should Agree on Home Tasks for Child

Youngsters Should Learn To Do Definite Jobs at Regular Time

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

Today I wish to offer some suggestions on training the growing child to help at home. In the first place, the parents should sit down together, when the child is not present, even long before he is old enough to help, in order to agree on what this child can do and should be expected to do about the home. Then they should decide on how to train him for his duties. From time to time they should revise these plans. In case there are several children, however, over five or six years old, the matter might well be discussed by the entire family in the spirit of a family council.

If one parent criticizes the other parent before the child for not requiring this child to help enough about the home, the effect is very bad. When this happens the other parent tends to defend the youngster and require less of him, and he to choose to do less and less, and even that grudgingly.

Set Regular Time

The parents should aim to have the child learn to do a few definite jobs at a regular time without being told when to do them. Let the goals all be self-reminding, self-starting, self-directing. Having him hang around half an hour or an hour before starting to help is merely to make a robot of him, and make him dislike his chores. Long before the child is assigned a definite job to do regularly each day, he should have learned to take care of himself, dress himself, prepare himself for meals, and appear at the table promptly, being himself in from play, and when the lights appear send himself to bed at a definite, regular hour each night.

One Job at First

Don't expect too much of the growing child. Begin with only one assigned regular job, one he is able to do well, such as emptying the wastebasket at a regular time each day. Add no new jobs until he has done this job without prompting for at least ten days. In case your child six, eight or ten years of age is supposed to do several jobs daily but does none of them without being told repeatedly to do them, it may be wise to reduce them to just one job until he has learned complete responsibility for it.

Should some reward or approval plan aid you in training this child to do the one or more jobs assigned, do it, but as soon as it fails to pull it off, and by all means don't pro-

Road to Romance

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE
KEN CALLED Mary during the evening and asked to drive her home from work. "Better let me take you. It's the last time I'll have the car. I've bought a bicycle."

As they rode along toward the beach later, Mary laughed at his tire-saving prudence. "Although it'll be healthy," she admitted. "Well, I figured this way," Ken glanced over at her with an honest twinkle in his eye. "It looks like my overtime would be keeping up for a while, so I hardly ever get a chance to take you home anyway. So, I might just as well conserve the old buggy."

Mary tried to keep up a light bantering, but it was hard. She felt depressed tonight. Ken noticed it despite her efforts at cheerfulness, and demanded the reason. Mary said it was a slight headache. She couldn't tell him she was in the throes of a let-down over her work with the F. B. I. She had been so thrilled with her results that first day, so confident that the information she had wormed out of the unsuspecting Joe Banks and the license number of his friends' car would bring fast results, would soon clear up the sabotage ring. She realized now she had been expecting miracles.

"Why aren't you ever in the lunchroom any more?" Ken broke into her thoughts. "Connie said you eat later."

"Yes, and I miss our three-somes," Mary replied. "It isn't much fun eating later."

She meant it. Her lunch periods with Joe Banks were becoming a trial. She had gotten the cream of his information and didn't seem to be able to coax him into further confidences. She was, instead, playing a defensive game in gently refusing to divulge her address. Danvers had been adamant on this score. She saw now that he was entrusting her with no serious or dangerous part of the investigation, in spite of all his lurid warnings. This strict caution was probably the best way, yet she ached with impatience to get into some action that would bring results. She couldn't stand this waiting much longer.

She knew in her heart Bruce Martin was not in the sabotage ring, yet there was a growing pressure of desire to be certain of it. She knew that Bruce, himself, could not endure the strain of the situation much longer, either. Almost as if he had read her thoughts, Ken was saying, "I suppose you've heard the latest on Bruce Martin."

Her breath stopped for a second at his tone. Then she steadied herself and admitted quietly that she hadn't.

"They say he's been grounded. Took a plane up without orders, had a sweet row with the boss, and now he's under suspension until everything can be cleared up or he's cleared out."

"He didn't—quit then?"

"I don't know. Maybe he did. It just happened last night. He's probably out on a bender now."

Ken stopped the car before the Circle, but Mary couldn't eat anything. "I think I'll go home and go right to bed," she decided. So Ken reluctantly dropped her at the apartment door. "Let me know when you feel like a bicycle ride," he called back in parting.

Mary slipped quietly into the living room to avoid waking Fran, but she listened eagerly for Fran's usual sleepy greeting. She wanted to talk over the frightening news of Bruce. Then she saw a note on the table. "Late call at the studio. Be home in the wee morning hours, probably. What a life!"—Fran.

Mary paced the apartment restlessly, too miserable to warm herself a soothing cup of milk, too nervous to sleep. She jumped as the telephone rang.

Her heart beating fast with apprehension, she ran for it. A man's rough voice came over heavily. "Hi, Sister! Know who this is?"

"No!"

The man chuckled. "Joe Banks," he crowed. "I got your phone number from your little friend in personnel. Couldn't keep it from a smart guy forever."

Mary gave a sickly laugh. When he suggested coming around for a while, she hedged quickly.

"You see, my roommate is asleep. She was learning to lie beautifully since she had met Joe Banks, she thought wryly."

"Well then, how's for dropping around to a night spot or two," Joe proposed elegantly.

"You see, I have a headache," she began. And then, as Joe Banks argued the point, Ken's words came back to her. "Bruce Martin—probably out on a bender somewhere."

Mary heard herself saying slowly, "All right. But I'm warning you—I'm restless tonight. I'll want to keep moving."

Joe Banks laughed good naturedly. "Just what I like."

Mary ran to the bedroom closet, changed her dark suit for a beige wool with bright green silk scarf. She slipped into her light camel's hair sport coat and pulled a broad-brimmed green hat over her soft hair. Her hands trembled with cold excitement, but her tight, fevered desperation was gone. She didn't care that she was disobeying Danvers' orders. She had to go with Joe Banks tonight, whatever happened.

She met him at a drug store three blocks away. She had refused to allow him to learn the location of her apartment. Joe Banks was in a worn coupe. He had borrowed it for the evening. Now, where did Mary want to go first?

"What about the Belvedere Beach club?" she said quickly. "I'd love to start off there."

"Hey!" Joe Banks cried good naturedly. "What do you think I am—a millionaire? I don't belong to a joint like that."

"All right. Let's go to all the joints you go to—when you go on a bender," Mary retorted.

Joe Banks laughed loudly and drove off. "That's hunk! Dory with me, Sister!"

"And I don't like to hang around long in one place," Mary reminded him crisply.

He went on laughing. His large hand reached across to pat her knee commandingly. "You're a fast little number, ain'tcha?"

It was a strenuous evening. It would have been a trifling evening to Mary on any other night. But tonight her nervous impatience to cover every night spot was not assumed. She insisted on champagne cocktails after Joe Banks confessed they didn't hit him till the next morning. And after the first stop, he didn't notice that he always consumed hers, too. Joe was having a wonderful time. He had never been out with such a swell looking little dish, he thought proudly, and was she giving him the opportunity to show her off to all his friends! She was a speedboat, this little model. The way they whisked from one smoky bar to another had him going around in circles. "Didn't we go 'way from that last place before we got our drink?" he wondered happily as they approached a roadside tavern.

"You just forgot," Mary taunted. She stopped in the doorway of the large, crowded barroom and peered through the smoky darkness with aching eyes. They couldn't go to any more, she thought in sudden despair. It was terribly late even for the swing shift, and he certainly wouldn't be able to drive much longer. She realized how tired she was, what a nightmare she'd been going through . . . and then her searching gaze stopped abruptly. Bruce Martin was sitting hunched over the far end of the bar!

Deferre To Direct Opening Concert In Cumberland

"La Boheme" Will Be Presented at Fort Hill Friday Night

In an elaborate setting of colorful scenery and costumes, Desire Deferre, stage manager of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will direct a performance of Puccini's opera, "La Boheme", to open the current season of the Cumberland Concert Association.

The opera will be held in Fort Hill auditorium Friday night, opening a series of four musical attractions.

Season tickets will be sold until the opening performance and may be obtained from the secretary, Mrs. A. N. Golladay, the Music Shop, 3 South Liberty street; Miss Dorothy Willson, Allegheny high school, or Miss Dorothy Seebree, Fort Hill high school. Single tickets to the opera are also on sale.

A cast featuring the Metropolitan stars—Susanne Fisher, Frances Greer, and William Hain—with a picked chorus, will be directed by Deferre. A Frenchman by birth, and an American of long standing citizenship, Deferre has long been active in the most famous opera companies of the world, first as a leading baritone and more recently as stage-director.

Desire Deferre's career includes sixteen years at Covent Garden, London; thirty years with the Chicago Opera company, and the last twelve seasons with the Metropolitan Opera company in New York. During these years he has had charge of nearly all productions by the Metropolitan and Chicago companies on their annual road tours.

Played in Paris

It was under his direction that the Chicago Civic Opera, in a more prosperous era, presented a five-week season of opera in Paris. He has also directed and sung in performances of opera in the Opera Comique in Paris, and the famous Teatro Colon in Buenos Aires.

Other attractions of the current season include Joseph Battista, pianist; Jan Klepura, Metropolitan tenor; and Edith Schiller, piano soloist with the Farman String Symphony.

Blackout

North Mechanic street and this case will likely receive special attention. Dr. Robert W. Work was commander at the local control center. Among others present were William Kaidor, controller; Edgar H. Reynolds, utilities chief; Dr. Theodore R. Shrop, chief medical officer; Beld C. Hoenicks, fire chief; Lt. James E. Van, representing Chief Eyerman of the police department; Leo T. Downey, state roads director; E. A. Cosgrove, communications officer; Lt. Daniel McKay, of Company C, representing the Maryland State Guard; and Mrs. Morris Rosenbaum, chairman of the Emergency Food and Housing Corps.

Ingram Views Blackout

Vincent P. Ingram, civilian defense director of Allegheny county, a patient at Allegheny hospital, viewed the blackout from an upper floor of the hospital, and told Myers that it was "very good."

Services Will Be Held For John Vernon Allen

Funeral services will be held today for John Vernon Allen, Fort Ashby, W. Va., who died in Allegheny hospital at 11 o'clock Monday night, ten hours after he fell from the roof of a building he was helping to raze at the old N. and G. Taylor mill.

Surviving are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Allen, three brothers, Paul R. Allen, Springfield, W. Va.; Robert L. Allen, Cumberland; James Allen and three sisters, Miss Eva Allen, Mrs. Seymour L. Pyles and Mrs. Edwin T. Parry, Frostburg.

RIDENBAUGH RECEIVES SUSPENDED SENTENCES ON ASSAULT CHARGES

Bruce A. Ridenbaugh, 30, alias Bruce Dunningham, 900-block Maryland avenue, yesterday received suspended sentences of ninety days each on two charges of common assault.

Ridenbaugh was charged with having assaulted George Ruhl, manager of the Workers Social Club, and Ruhl's daughter, Mrs. Mary Shekas, during a melee at the club on October 22.

Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., in giving Ridenbaugh the suspended sentences, warned him to refrain from further disorder and stay away from the club. Clarence Shutter, attorney, represented Ridenbaugh.

Bowman's Addition Fire Company Elects New Officers

John Greise was recently elected president of Bowman's Addition Fire Company. The following subordinate officers also were elected: Harry McLucas, fire chief; Lloyd Nycum, vice-president; Samuel Diehl, recording secretary; Harry Hoffman, treasurer; Arthur Smith, assistant fire chief; Robert Shobe, sergeant-at-arms and Russell Robinson, James Coleman and Charles Otten, trustees.

The volunteer company will sponsor a scrap metal drive Saturday and Sunday in the Valley and Bedford roads sections.

Residents of the area are requested to assemble their contributions to the drive in front of their homes before the designated days so the firemen will be able to complete the collection in the allotted time.

Proceeds of the drive will be placed in the fire department fund.

Three GOP Candidates File Election Expense Reports at Court House

Three candidates have filed reports of expenses in the election campaign, at the office of the clerk of court, Allegheny county. He shows no contributions.

Charles M. See, Republican candidate for House of Delegates reports spending $10 for a party donation and $7.50 for advertising. He shows no contributions received.

Robert Jackson, candidate for clerk of court reports a donation of $45 to the party and $9 for advertising. Jackson also shows he received no contributions.

Welfare Board Hears Talk by Patterson

J. Milton Patterson, director of the Maryland Department of Public Welfare, last evening told directors and staff members of the Allegheny County Welfare Board of developments that might be expected due to the war at a meeting in the welfare board office, Cumberland street.

He also spoke of the many problems confronting the agency at the present time and stressed the importance of the board and its staff functioning to its fullest extent.

Members of the board in attendance were Roy W. Eves, chairman, Mrs. J. C. Cobey, the Rev. Edward P. Heinze and C. William Gilchrist. Miss Irene Olson, executive secretary, and twenty-five staff members also were present.

Staub Heads Maryland Christmas Seal Sale

William H. Staub has been named general Christmas Seal Sale chairman for the Maryland Tuberculosis Association. It was announced yesterday by Dr. Samuel Wolman, president of the association.

Staub also first vice-president of the association, will succeed the late Henry P. Baker who was Seal Sale chairman for twenty years.

During his long active service for the betterment of public health in Maryland, Staub served as president of the Maryland Tuberculosis Association from 1928 to 1930.

Besides being general Seal Sale chairman for the state, Staub will also be in charge of the sale in Baltimore, Calvert, Carroll, Charles, Garrett, St. Mary's and Somerset counties.

Harvey H. Weiss, superintendent of Memorial hospital, is chairman for Allegheny county.

Ten Precautions Listed For Use Of City Water

Charles J. Bruce Tells What To Do During Air Raid Alarms

Rules for preserving the city's water supply and precautions regarding the use of water in the event of air raids or other emergencies were issued yesterday by C. J. Bruce, water works superintendent.

The list of ten precautions follows:

Keep available at least one quart bottle filled with drinking water for each person in the house.

Always turn water faucets off everywhere in the house when water service has failed.

Do not fill bathtubs with water following air raid alarms or during raids.

Leave valves alone.

Remember that the water department knows the service is off in your area. Your telephone report is not necessary.

Discontinue immediately use of flush toilet when water service goes off. Follow the directions of the health department.

Protect your health by boiling the drinking and cooking water.

Accept chlorine tastes in your drinking water without complaining. It is a sign of safety.

Do not drink water obtained from other sources than your tap or drinking water carts operated by authorities.

Do not believe or repeat rumors concerning water. The health authorities know the water supply facts and will advise you.

Bruce also reported to the mayor and city council that water consumption for the week ending Sunday totaled 62,900,000 gallons. This is a daily average of 8,986,000 compared to a daily average of 8,583,000 gallons for the same period a year ago. Water in Lake Koon is four feet, one inch below the spillway and in Lake Gordon is one inch above the crest of the dam.

Air Corps Enlistment Is Open to Youths 18 and 19 Years Old

Youths eighteen and nineteen years of age can now enlist in the United States Army Air Corps, Tech. Sgt. Clarence Blehn, local recruiter, announced Monday. Youths of that age, he said, can enlist in any branch of the army with the exception of the finance department.

Effective

Dwight D. Eisenhower at Algiers, receiving, in the words of an Allied spokesman, "all the consideration due his rank."

Petain Orders Resistance

Old Marshal Petain, stubbornly repeating his order for resistance, took over the disorganized and melancholy defense of all French North Africa that is left to the Vichy elements. There were rumors that Germany had loaned him Field Marshal Erwin Von Witzleben, one-time attacker of the Maginot line, and that the German marshal had reached North Africa to act as the Vichy field commander.

Official Allied headquarters accounts of the fall of Oran said that the American forces, with tanks, field artillery and mortars, had begun to infiltrate the outskirts at 7:30 a. m. in a general attack.

They were covered by the Twelfth United States Air Force under command of Brig.-Gen. James Doolittle, hero of the Tokyo raid, and by British warships and naval aircraft.

It was a pincers movement by columns from east and west.

By 7:30 a. m. the Western force was about three miles from the heart of the city, just west of the naval station of Mers El Kebir. At the same hour the Eastern force was seven miles from the center of Oran and driving in rapidly.

One column from this latter force was detached to move eastward and deal with a French counter-attack. Fighting was reported eastward of Orleansville, half way to Algiers.

Another American armored force south of the city was on the alert against counter-action by Vichy reinforcements.

The main columns closed in swiftly in brief but furious fighting, and by afternoon the city had fallen, with American occupation of the hill and fort of Santa Cruz, dominating the bay. Firing ceased about 3 p. m.

Air Force Occupies Fields

The Twelfth Air Force moved into all four of the air fields around the city. La Senia, the last field to be taken, was captured by an armored force after two days of fighting.

Evidently presaging the early fall of Casablanca, a communiqué No. 4 from Allied headquarters said the resistance of French naval units off that Moroccan city on the Atlantic coast had been overcome "to a large degree."

Specifically, it was announced, the new French Battleship Jean Bart had been reduced to a flaming hulk, the entire flotilla of Vichy destroyers and other light units wiped out and a French cruiser damaged.

Rear Admiral Hewitt used the full weight of his heavy naval units and their air arm in the assault.

On land east of Casablanca, Vichy acknowledged, "superior armored units" were heavily attacking the city. A short time later communications between Morocco and mainland France were cut.

DOUGHBOY ANGLES AT TAJ MAHAL

Allied headquarters reported the full occupation of Fedala and Melidia, above Casablanca, and Safi, below it. There were reports that General Auguste Nogues, the Vichy Moroccan commander, had retired from threatened Rabat.

Thus two of the queen cities of French North Africa, Algiers and Oran, were in American hands and the third, Casablanca, was tottering.

From Algiers, by the shortest route to Libya, an American force was reported in Bou Saada, 120 miles southeast of Algiers and about 400 miles from the Tripolitan border of Western Libya.

There was still no confirmation of reported American incursion on the coast of Eastern Algeria and Tunisia, and in London it was believed the plan for getting in the rear of Marshal Rommel's beaten armies was to by-pass the Tunisian coastal sector, outflanking the Northern Vichy defenses and avoiding the full assault of Axis aircraft based either in Tunisia or on Italian soil.

American Casualties Light

While the German command announced the entrance of its U-boats into the North African campaign, there were roundabout and unconfirmed reports that Italian troops had arrived in Bizerte, Tunisia; that Italian planes were utilizing Tunisian bases.

There also was another rumor, broadcast from the Spanish-controlled station at Tangier, that a French fleet squadron had left Toulon, the Southern French base which has been under careful Allied air reconnaissance.

United States casualties still were light, although considerable naval resistance had remained until today.

Tangier reports said American troops still were landing in the Southern Moroccan ports of Mogador and Agadir, despite some Vichy denials. Tanks and parachutists alike were reported employed there.

Politically, the capture of Darlan, the difficult position of Nogues and the ascendancy of General Henri Honore Giraud, whom the Nazis could not hold either in a German prison or in Vichy France, were events of the highest importance to the future of French North Africa.

The 63-year-old Giraud, now in Algeria, will not only organize a new French North African Army to fight the Axis, but he will set up some sort of a French government for the area, General Eisenhower said last night.

U. S. Planes

reached the city limits, three miles from the starting point, in two hours.

Seven miles East of Oran another elite combat team started driving directly on the city and sent an offshoot directly to the West. This side column pushed aside a French flanking force and engaged in a sharp fight when the French began a heavy counter-attack at La Maceta.

The naval forces destroyed all light French naval forces which attempted to interfere with landings, and won high praise in dispatches from Gen. Fredendall.

American soldiers, dog-tired and grimy after three days of steady marching and fighting, proved their hardihood by smashing forward with the final punch necessary to end the battle and open the big port to Allied convoys.

French Posts Cut Off

After the tank column broke into the city, the French asked for an armistice, and Brig.-Gen. Oliver crossed the lines and arranged the capitulation.

The isolated French posts in the interior were now cut off and probably must eventually surrender after this amazing sixty-hour campaign which has given the Allies nearly 600 miles of seacoast from Algiers to Gibraltar.

Leaning back in his chair after the tense hours, Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower closed his eyes and said "I was no child's play at Oran and I am mighty proud of our boys who have not had any sleep since Friday night."

Then leaning forward with a serious expression on his face, he added, "but I don't want to make this appear as a great military victory. The French are our friends and we want to keep them as our friends. We only fought because we had to."

At Algiers, where Vichy's defense chief, Admiral Jean Darlan is now a guest of an American general, the Axis has been attacking Allied naval forces, but the damage is described by headquarters as light.

Carrier-based planes and RAF fighter squadrons stationed on captured airdromes have exacted a heavy toll of these Axis raiders, it was said.

Algiers Welcomes Yanks

In the Algiers area American troops are reported to have been welcomed by the population of the famous city which sometimes is called "Africa's Paris."

There is official silence here on the status of Darlan.

Maj. Gen. George S. Patton's forces engaged in the Moroccan campaign against Casablanca have captured Melidia in addition to Safi and Fedala and all troops are now reported ashore and driving forward with their equipment.

During the first two days French destroyers and light torpedo boats made repeated attacks in efforts to interrupt the landings. Rear Admiral H. K. Hewitt, American commander of naval forces, finally had to turn loose American sea and air strength to annihilate the light French forces.

Field reports here were not clear whether the 35,000-ton French battleship at Casablanca was damaged by bombs or by shells from the big guns of American warships, but it was known that American carrier-based dive-bombers have been attacking warships in the harbor.

With the capture of Algiers and Oran, the Allies now hold the two best ports in the Western Mediterranean and fighter cover from shore bases for their convoys.

"Our job now is to reorganize and get after the enemy common to both of us," said Eisenhower.

Both Algiers and Oran field commanders reported that resistance at both those places was confined to professional soldiers and sailors who obey Vichy orders.

Allies Gain Naval Base

The capture of Oran gives the Allies a large naval base and a deep harbor from which the largest ships of the American and British navies could support expanding offensive action and seek out Italy's seldom seen fleet.

The supreme commander said he could not praise too highly the coordination between naval, ground and air forces in the Oran assault.

The fall of Oran is certain to have a profound effect on the fighting in Morocco on the Atlantic coast, where field reports show the forces of Maj.-Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., are making steady progress. Communications between Algeria and Morocco have been hampered by bad atmospheric conditions.

It took the Germans six weeks to crush Norwegian resistance in Norway—a country much smaller than French North Africa and without easy reach of Nazi bombers. Eisenhower's split-second, synchronized campaign, conceived in bases thousands of miles away, has accomplished a comparable result in sixty hours.

The tough one-time cowboy who now wears three stars on each shoulder is giving the Germans a lesson in the type of war they originated—blitzkrieg.

His biggest regret concerning this campaign—which is an example of the efficiency of having one supreme commander for land, sea and air forces—is that "there was any need to fight at all."

Preliminary and incomplete reports indicate that Allied losses were light for the gains involved and were far below expectations.

Mrs. Dick received a Christmas greeting Monday morning from her daughter, who wishes all those at home a happy time at Christmas. She will spend the holiday helping the soldiers celebrate a Merry Christmas in Australia, she says, adding "We are all glad we are nurses and can do our part."

Powerful Fleet

ment that Axis submarines and planes had destroyed three Allied ships, including a cruiser and a transport, and that fourteen other vessels had been hit by bombs.

Rome said there had been "successful attacks" by submarines on British and American warships in Mediterranean waters.

The Italian surface fleet, a considerable force possibly including as many as seven battleships, was still in hiding. But it seemed certain that Hitler, in his reported conference with Pierre Laval and Mussolini, would have some assignment for the Italian war vessels.

The British Admiralty reported the torpedoing of an Italian cruiser off the North coast of Sicily, indicating that the British were pressing the sea war right to the shores of Italy.

German submarines were expected to step up their activity, and in Washington Secretary of the Navy Knox warned that Germany would doubtless throw all the power of its undersea craft into a great effort to prevent the shipment of supplies to United States forces in Africa. He believed submarines would be withdrawn from other regions in an effort to stave off the great menace to the Axis cause which is arising in Africa.

But from the Allied side came a bit of encouraging news regarding the war against submarines. A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, reported in the House of Commons that to date 570 German under sea vessels are known to have been sunk, damaged or captured.

The report that another great Allied armada, perhaps comparable in size to the aggregation of ships which took the American Expeditionary Force to Africa, is assembled at Gibraltar was broadcast by the Vichy radio, and also mentioned in some dispatches from Spain. There has been no verification of this from any Allied quarters.

The Vichy radio said that the 35,000-ton Battleship Nelson, a cruiser and two transports were the first to arrive at Gibraltar, followed by the British Aircraft Carrier Furious, six destroyers and twenty-two merchantmen, including two tankers.

The air over Gibraltar, the Vichy report added, was filled with United States planes.

A communique issued here said that American war vessels off Casablanca had overcome French naval resistance in that quarter "to a large degree."

The German radio reported that a submarine torpedoed a British battleship of the 35,000-ton Queen Elizabeth class. It was not claimed that the vessel was destroyed, but the German announcement said a heavy explosion on the vessel was observed. There was no indication of where this action took place, as the report was not substantiated by British sources.

A Vichy report that four Allied warships and six transports had been sunk was denied here as being "completely false."

Vichy also said that American reconnaissance planes flew over Toulon apparently trying to ascertain how much of the French fleet had been left over.

Sounded Like Animal Day in Circuit Court

Civil Case Involves a Mule Who Got in the Way of an Auto

A 1,400-pound mule worth $250, a Plymouth automobile, a rattlesnake, a cat, a mouse and a dog, all figured in the testimony in circuit court today in a highly unusual civil case before Associate Judge William Huster and a jury.

The case, docketed as Cornelius and the Fireman's Fund Insurance Company, vs. Jessie Cook of Dawson, involved the killing of a mule by the Plymouth auto.

Jessie, owner of the car, filed suit against Cook, owner of the mule, for damages done his auto when it ran over the mule on Route 220, the Mullen highway near Dawson.

According to the testimony, Dye, a Chinese passenger to and from the Chinese in his car was driving along the road on a dark night, when his car suddenly struck and killed the mule, which had escaped from a nearby pasture.

Witnesses for Dye attempted to show that he was traveling between thirty-five and forty miles per hour, and that the mule was in a depression or dip in the road and was not visible.

Other witnesses testified that the dip in the road was very slight, and the witness told the jury that it was only about a twenty-inch dip, and that the mule would be clearly visible. To further this point, attorneys questioned witnesses about the dip. One said that it wouldn't be possible to see a mouse or cat on the road in the dip, but a mule would be visible. Another witness said he had noticed this dip many times and knew it as a rattlesnake crossing. He explained to the jury that it was entirely possible to see a rattlesnake cross the road at this point, so he felt anyone who was driving carefully could see a 1,400-pound mule.

Testimony also showed there was negligence on the part of Cook who owned the mule. Just how the mule escaped from the pasture is not known, except that evidence has offered that the gate to the pasture had been closed by one of Cook's employees, but was found open when the mule had been hit.

The jury returned a verdict for the defendant. No one said anything about blaming the mule. He's dead, and by this time buried.

Four Deeds Filed in Court Records

Four deeds were filed Monday at the clerk's office, Allegany county court house, showing property sales amounting to $900.

Manley J. Broadwater and Eva Broadwater, in a deed dated June 1940, conveyed to Guy F. Warrick and Violet Warrick a lot situated on the southwest side of Route No. 40, west of Frostburg, for about $100. A second deed for the property, dated November 2, 1942, conveys to Warrick and his wife to George C. Weimer and George F. Weimer for about $300.

Isabel Florence Pitts et al, transferred to Louis Weber, lots Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4 on the east side of Main street in Oldtown, for about $300.

The Consolidation Coal Company conveyed to Irvin L. Kallmyer and his wife, part of lot No. 24 and lot No. 25 at Wright's Crossing, in election district No. 28, for about $200.

One mortgage, one chattel mortgage and four conditional sale contracts were also recorded.

Baltimore and Ohio M.C.A. Enrolls 550 Membership Drive

Hundred and fifty persons taken out memberships in the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Y.M.C.A. during the campaign which ended last month and will continue until December 15, it was announced yesterday by Courtney G. Cline, secretary.

Cline said he expects 700 members to be enrolled by the closing of the drive.

The goal was fixed at 1,100 members and the slump is attributed to the fact that approximately 300 members were transferred from Cumberland to Keyser.

Last year the Baltimore and Ohio M.C.A. signed up 1,042 members during its annual campaign.

Biehn's Nephews Win Coveted Army Silver Star Award

Technical Sgt. Clarence Biehn, 10-year army recruiter, yesterday received word through an Oakland, newspaper of the decoration of two of his nephews with the coveted United States Army Silver Star.

The nephews were engaged in two recent acts of heroism against the Japanese. Both are machine gunners on Flying Fortresses. One is Sgt. Carl M. Biehn, who went forward for action against the enemy in the Dutch East Indies while the other, Sgt. Norman L. Biehn, was in an air attack on Lae, New Guinea.

Technical Sgt. Biehn has not seen his nephews since they were children, but nevertheless he is immensely proud of their accomplishments.

Flatulence, a Common Condition, Has Many Causes but Seldom Is Serious

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
Flatulence, or gas in the stomach or bowel, is one of the commonest symptoms of which people with digestive disorders complain. They are likely to attach great importance to it, especially if they feel a frequent urge to get rid of the gas. But to the doctor it means very little, and he never regards it as seriously as the patient does. Of the many misconceptions held about gas and belching, probably the foremost is that the gas comes from the fermentation of food. This is not the case. All the gas in the stomach and intestines is swallowed. We all swallow some air with our food. We all swallow air when we eat raisin bread. And some people unconsciously are air swallows.

To The Voters

I wish to express my sincere thanks to the voters of Allegany county for re-electing me as a Judge of the Orphans' Court. I assure them of my best efforts to justify their confidence in me.

J. French Van Meter

Air Is Needed

The stomach always needs some air inside it in order to function properly. Whenever one sees an X-ray picture of the stomach, a gas bubble is seen at the top. Swallowed air stays in the stomach and shortly comes into equilibrium with the gases of the venous blood. Therefore, it is richer in carbon dioxide and poorer in oxygen than atmospheric air.

Another symptom of flatulence is a feeling of bloating and distention. This usually means nothing. It is most often found in nervous, hyper-sensitive patients.

The lower bowel, or rectum, like the stomach, normally is clean and empty and distended with gas. When a normal person eats breakfast this gas bubble is pressed upon and stimulates the lower bowel to evacuation. The habit of passing this gas is one of the commonest causes of constipation.

Certain foods, such as beans, have long had a reputation for being gaseous, but in question 500 percents with flatulence about the foods, which they thought caused it, Hinshaw found very little agreement. The one most often blamed was onions. Then in order of frequency, cooked cabbage, raw apples, radishes, dried beans, cucumbers, milk, fatty or rich foods, melons, cauliflower, chocolate, coffee, lettuce, peanuts, eggs, oranges, tomatoes, strawberries.

It is probable that if a person becomes bloated due to eating some particular food, he is allergic to that food. It is not by any means always the indigestible foods that cause gas, but often such mild ones as milk and eggs, which have a fine reputation in the sick room.

Causes of Attacks

Many minor upsets in health cause attacks of gas. Nervous people who get upset suffer for it by a day or two of gassiness. In some of my friends, the onset of a cold is heralded by gassy days. Pain brings it on and, notoriously, any upset in the gallbladder does also.

Treatment depends on finding the cause and eliminating it. But in most cases the cure comes when the patient is made to realize that it is not serious, is not the sign of anything.

Questions and Answers

W. H. R., Detroit, Mich.—Is it true that removal of a child's tonsils lowers his resistance to infantile paralysis?

Answer: No.

Many Corporations Lose Their Charters

BALTIMORE, Nov. 10 (AP)—Chairman William L. Henderson of the Maryland Tax Commission announces that "twice as many" charters of Maryland corporations have been dissolved so far this year as compared to the corresponding period of 1941.

Most of the charters were dissolved, Henderson said, because the corporations failed to file returns. In fact, he added, so many corporations failed to file the reports that the Tax Commission sent out a circular follow-up letter. This brought some replies, showing the failure was due to carelessness, the chairman asserted.

Other corporations, hard pressed by priorities, financial difficulties as a result of the war situation and labor shortage, evidently took that method of dissolution, Henderson said.

An additional factor was the $10 corporation tax imposed on all concerns for the first time this year. Henderson said "it cleared a lot of dead wood off the books which is just what the legislation was intended for."

At the principal shrimp production points in Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas, during August, 1942, about 36,000 barrels of shrimp were landed.

Legislators May Get Pay Raise

Baltimore County Vote Gives Them Majority for Amendment

BALTIMORE, Nov. 10. (P)—A heavy vote from Baltimore county in favor of the constitutional amendment increasing legislators' salaries to $10,000 a year today has given that proposal a good chance of becoming law—but it still faces two more hurdles.

They are changes from the counting Friday of absentee soldier ballots, and in the official count of ballots in Baltimore city, Allegany and Harford counties.

A tabulation complete except for Somerset county and official except for Baltimore city and Allegany and Harford gave:

For the measure: 60,266.
Against it: 58,971.

Somerset, with twenty-three polling places, cast more than 6,000 votes for governor, but voting in most counties was far lighter on the seven proposed amendments to the state constitution.

Legislators now receive $5 a day.

A tabulation Saturday, with about 250 polling places missing, showed the salaries amendment trailing by 4,300 votes, but complete official returns from Baltimore county today helped put the measure ahead.

Money May Lead To Delinquency In Adolescents

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Does it work out well for the average sixteen-year-old to have a highly-paid job?

This question, which cannot be answered in the affirmative, is the heart of a new war-time problem, with which many serious persons and groups are now concerned themselves.

Girls, Too, Get Jobs

It has come about very naturally. With fathers in the service and mothers over-busy, some of them with war-work, and with older brothers in army camps, there are available large numbers of jobs connected with war production but not demanding skill or experience. These have been filled by youngsters who have been made dizzy with delight at the high pay they receive. Most of them have been boys but in many cases girls, too, some of them as young as 13, have been among the lucky ones.

Lucky, that is, from their own point of view, for, as might have been expected, children of from 13 to 16 rarely have the necessary steadiness to handle large sums of money. The rise in delinquency cases has been startling. Boys and girls with too much freedom, too much money, too little education and not enough home supervision cannot be expected, it seems, to lead reasonable lives. The topple over into misdemeanor and misfortune.

Common Sense to Rescue

Common sense is coming to the rescue. In New York, for instance, all child-welfare agencies are going to take part in forming a program for straightening matters out. One of the points agreed on is that children must not be released from school too early. The recruiting of volunteers for child care is part of the half-formed plan. Study of methods followed here during the first World War, and in England during the present war, is sure to help. Our prime consideration is that we must not allow human material to be ruined before it becomes mature—not even to further war production.

Soldier's Pay Query

Dear Miss Fairfax: As I now have a fair position in civilian capacity, can you tell me the equivalent of a soldier's pay in civilian earnings?

R. T. W.

Including his regular pay, the food, shelter and medical care, he receives, and an approximate saving in other fields, it is estimated that a soldier's pay is equivalent to that of a civilian earning about $1700 a year.

Service Flags and Pins

Dear Miss Fairfax: Can you give me some information about the small service pins patterned after the service flags?

I have a husband in the merchant marine, a brother in the Navy and a brother-in-law in the Army. Would it be correct for me to wear one of these pins with two or three stars?

MARY BETH

At present the United States does not have a service flag or pin. However, the House Military Affairs Committee has approved a Senate bill directing the Secretary of War to approve a standard design for a service flag and a service label button or pin.

The flag would be displayed in residences of persons who are members of an immediate family of a member of the armed forces. In that case you would wear a pin with two stars on it.

Wife's Allowance

Dear Miss Fairfax: I married my husband after he enlisted in the Navy. He was previously married and is paying an allowance for his two children's support. Who is entitled to the wife's allotment—his divorced wife or I? Who applies for the allowance?

O. E. K.

If your husband is paying alimony to his divorced wife, by order of the Court, he must continue this payment up to $42.00 a month. The allowance depends on the amount of alimony and the number of other dependents of his service man.

You are also entitled to the $50.00 allowance, and your husband should make application for this through his commanding officer.

War Bonds Delayed

Dear Miss Fairfax: My husband is an officer in the Navy, and instead of sending me an allotment each month he is arranging to have a $50 bond deducted from his pay each month. Up to the present I have not received any of these bonds, and it has been two months since he started.

ANXIOUS

There has been such a demand for war savings bonds by service men that the mailing of these bonds each month has necessarily been delayed. The Government keeps records of all bond purchases and usually gets out the bonds to purchasers within 90 days. The purchase bill directing the Secretary of War

Radio Schedules Special Armistice Day Programs

Roosevelt Will Be Heard at Arlington National Cemetery

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Armistice day observance is scheduled for the networks on Wednesday. Primarily it will be the American Legion ceremonies at Arlington national cemetery. The program starts at 10:37 a. m. and will include a minute of silence at 11. Networks carrying are NBC and Blue. President Roosevelt is to speak briefly.

Among those to be heard are Commander Roane Waring and Auxiliary President Ruth Mathemat, while the national anthem will be sung by radio's Lucy Monroe.

Other Armistice day features: Blue 3:45 p. m. Veterans of Foreign Wars, from Pittsburgh, including Commander Robert F. Merrill; CBS 9:30 "Fields of Corn," Armistice day drama for Dr. Christian, who is Jean Hersholt; MBS 10:45 "Religion: Fights for a Just Peace"; theme of program celebrating second anniversary of Radio Chapel.

New Cantor Protege

Eddie Cantor has a new protege he is to offer in his NBC show at 9. She is a ventriloquist, whose dummy is Judy Splinters, who loves boy friends and other items. The voice is sounded by 15-year-old Shirley Dinsdale, who thus is making her first start on a possible career.

California Melodies on MBS, instead of discontinuing with its director Dave Rose in the armed forces, is going right ahead on MBS, but changing to Wednesday at 7:30. Another Armistice day broadcast is the scheduling at 3:30 p. m. by CBS of a talk by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt from London.

Honor Roll Will Be Dedicated Sunday At Bowling Green

An honor roll dedication and flag raising ceremony will be held at Bowling Green Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The honor roll will bear the names of men and women in service who reside in the Bowling Green-Roberts place sector.

There will be several brief addresses and the band of Port Cumberland Post, No. 13, American Legion, will provide the music.

The honor roll will bear thirty names, lettered in black on a white background. The board, ten feet high, will be glass enclosed. The flag will be raised five feet behind the honor roll.

The echoing boom of the big guns of the last war had just begun to dull in our memory—when World War II became reality and blasted us all out of our peaceful way of life. Now it is time to remember—those who fought and bled and died in the battles of both wars. Now it is time to realize that this is the people's war—and that to win it, so that we will be victorious on the Armistice Day yet to come, each of us must fight with all our will and love of liberty!

Minister Honored In Frostburg on Anniversary

The Rev. W. D. Reese
Completes Twenty-five Years in Pastorate

FROSTBURG, Nov. 10.—The Rev. W. D. Reese, pastor of Mt. Zion Baptist church, and Mrs. Reese were guests of honor at a reception held last evening in the church marking the completion by the Rev. Mr. Reese of twenty-five years of service.

The affair arranged by the congregation, was presided over by Walter Powell, lay official of the church, and a historical sketch covering the past twenty-five years was read by James Beach, church clerk.

The Rev. Mr. Reese was presented with a purse by the congregation. The reception was attended by the mayor and city commissioners and a large company of friends. Tributes were paid the Rev. Mr. Reese and his wife by Mayor W. H. Lammert, John L. Dunkle, president of State Teachers college; the Rev. E. W. Saylor, the Rev. George L. Wehr, the Rev. W. Randolph Keefe, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Copeland, William Jenkins, Sr., William Jenkins, Jr., Rudolph Nickel, W. H. Kreitzburg, Mr. and Mrs. John Cook, the Rev. Raymond W. Cooke, Thomas H. Morgan and City Commissioner John Hendley, who referred to his association with the Rev. Mr. Reese as a member of the board of directors of Miners hospital.

The Rev. Mr. Reese responded briefly to the tributes, expressing his appreciation for the loyalty of his congregation and the genuine friendships among people of the community. Refreshments were served in the social hall of the church. Each guest received a piece of a huge three-tiered birthday cake presented to the Rev. and Mrs. Reese by the Pioneer class of the church.

Minister Accepts Call

The Rev. Edwin R. Weidner, 300 Johnston avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., has accepted a call from the congregation of Zion Evangelical and Reformed church to serve as pastor, effective early in January. He will succeed the Rev. I. F. Kracke, who recently resigned.

The Rev. Mr. Weidner preached a trial sermon here Sunday, November 1. At a later meeting the congregation voted to extend him an invitation to become pastor of the church.

Soldier is Honored

Pvt. John F. Fatkin, United States Army, who is spending a fifteen-day furlough with his parents in Lorton, was host Saturday evening at a party in celebration of his twenty-fourth birthday. He received numerous gifts. Games and refreshments were the diversions of the evening.

The guests included his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Fatkin, Dolores Sears, Anna Fatkin, Stanley Hitchcock, Eleanor Scott, Charles Wade, Elmer Speir, Melvin Albright, Rose Buckles, Marshall Albright, Ann McKenzie, Sam Filer, Lena Wampner, Chester Bevan, Mary Alice Fatkin, Harold Skidmore, Louise Loar, Melvin Blubaugh, Shirley Fatkin, Eddie Blubaugh, Emory Loar, Kenneth Fatkin, Francis Fatkin, Will Le and Irvin Scott and Billy Pair.

Church Group Elects

Mrs. Mary Ann McCulloh was elected president of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the Protestant State Teachers college. Other officers named to serve with her are Helen Mae McCulloh, vice-president; Leroy Davis, treasurer; Jean Kidwell, secretary; Effie Ray, leader; Gladys Belle McCulloh, assistant leader; Wanda Sperry and Donna House, social committee.

Nursery Mothers Meet

The mothers of the children of the Frostburg nursery met Thursday at Hill Street school and elected Mrs. Florence Crowe, president; Mrs. Sara Parry, vice-president; Mrs. Elizabeth Layman, secretary; treasurer, and Mrs. Margaret Geary, publicity director. The next meeting will be November 19.

Pledges are Honored

The Iota Alpha Sigma Fraternity of Frostburg State Teachers college held its banquet Thursday night in honor of the new pledges. The new members honored were: Robert Lammert, Frostburg, and Homer Lancaster, Eckhart. Other members present included James Davis, Ancil Stiles, Howard Blank, Dale Duling, James Gibbs, Conway Matthews, and Advisor Ivan C. Dehl.

SERVING IN AUSTRALIA

Lieut. G. E. Dick

LONA CONING, Nov. 10.—In recent letters to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Dick, Lonaconing, Lieut. Grace E. Dick, United States Army Nursing Corps, Australia, gives an insight into the conditions under which nurses are living with the army expeditionary forces during the present war. She is chief nurse of General hospital No. 42 and also is serving on the censor bureau in Australia. (see story this page.)

Lonaconing Girl Writes Parents From Australia

Lieut. Grace E. Dick Is Serving with Army
Nursing Corps

LONA CONING, Nov. 10.—Did you ever get a letter from overseas that was censored by the sender? Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Dick received one Monday from their daughter, Lieut. Grace Elinor Dick, United States Army Nursing Corps, who is stationed in Australia, the chief nurse of her unit at General hospital No. 42 and a censor for the United States mail as well.

Lieut. Dick, who has been assigned to overseas duty since June, in her first letter after reaching port, wrote home, "we are now in Australia—it is a beautiful country; the voyage was most delightful—of course, we only saw water and the sky above—but we were all very glad to see land."

"After our voyage we feel more than ever that our navy is tops. During the trip we crossed the equator and in the navy that calls for a great ceremony in honor of those who have never crossed before. They initiated all those who were 'going down under' for the first time—and what a time! They gave us nurses certificates showing that we had crossed the equator."

Live in Comfortable Quarters. "We have very comfortable living quarters here and plenty of good food. The people in Australia are kind to us and they try to make us feel right at home—it just seems they can't do enough for us."

"The only thing that does not seem as good as what we had in America is coffee, but we will get used to it before long."

After being in Australia for two months and settled in the new quarters she remarked, "all in all things are not much different from what we expected. We go to a movie now and then and we can also go horseback riding. We have a beautiful parlor set up so we can get our hair done right at home; we feel very lucky in having a good beautician with us. We have very nice quarters with a radio, piano and card tables, a laundry room and a kitchen."

In a letter received this month she related, "this is really a small world! Remember Dr. Joseph Preidman, who had an office in Lonaconing? Well, he is with us for a while. I also saw Dr. Schlimmer of Cumberland. I received a lot of the Cumberland NEWS papers."

"When mail arrives, that is the bright spot in this army life. It is really swell—we are all enjoying the work and life in the army."

Miss Dick, who was born and reared in Lonaconing, attended Jackson and Central schools. After graduating from Central with the class of '26 she entered the University of Maryland training school.

The alumni award for executive ability was bestowed upon Miss Dick when she graduated from the University hospital in 1929. She remained at University hospital as head nurse of the men's medical ward until 1934, when she was appointed supervisor of medical and surgical nursing.

Made Assistant Superintendent. In 1937 she accepted the position of assistant superintendent of the Charleston General hospital, Charleston, W. Va. She resigned this position in May to enlist in the service. She was commissioned a first lieutenant and assigned chief nurse of General hospital No. 42 at Camp Custer, Mich., before her assignment to overseas duty.

Lieut. Dick was among the 500 guests at the farewell banquet given by the alumni of the university to

J. D. Johnston, Hyndman, Weds Agnes L. Knode

Ceremony Is Performed in Sharpsburg Episcopal Church

HYNDMAN, Nov. 10.—Miss Agnes Lee Knode, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Knode, Hagerstown, became the bride of James D. Johnston, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Johnston, Hyndman, November 6 in St. Paul's Episcopal church, Sharpsburg, with the Rev. W. B. McKinley, pastor, officiating.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, was gownned in white embroidered satin with fitted torso and a V neckline. Her finger-tip veil of silk illusion was held in place by a cap of dutch lace, caught with seed pearls. She carried a white covered prayer book.

The maid of honor, Miss Juanita Trovinger, was attired in a gown of blue turquoise satin and carried a yellow chrysanthemum. The bridesmaids wore fashioned gowns of pink satin.

Mr. Johnston is a graduate of Hyndman high class of 1940, and the bride was graduated from Hagerstown high in the same year. Both Mr. and Mrs. Johnston are employed in the Fairchild Aircraft Plant, Hagerstown, where they will reside after the honeymoon trip.

Soldiers are Honored

Mr. and Mrs. John Wolford, RFD 1, entertained at a dinner yesterday in honor of two of Mrs. Wolford's brothers who are home on furlough from the United States Army, Privates William J. Miller, Port Bragg, N. C., and Robert B. Miller, Jr., Chanute Air Field, Rantoul, Ill.

Guests present were Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Miller, Sr., Clyde Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gaster and daughter, May Belle, all of Hyndman; Mr. and Mrs. Earl P. Roberson, La Vale, Miss Catherine Carpenter, Oak Ford, and Miss Margaret Ann Wolford, Stringtown.

Guests present were Janet Barclay, Sandra Cook, Georgia Ann Holler, Judy Ann Bowers, Deana Jo Rees, Irene Shaffer, Billy Miller, Robert Ray Hyatt, Johnny Keller, Gerald Thomas, Wayne Close, Joseph Luman, and Richard Jamison. Games were played and refreshments served.

Double Wedding Is Performed in New Germany Church

GRANTSVILLE, Nov. 10.—A double wedding of interest in the Trinity Reformed church, New Germany, Sunday, November 8, at 3 o'clock. The church was decorated with lights and white chrysanthemums.

The contracting couples were Miss Freda Broadwater, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd H. Broadwater, and Sgt. Donald Lewis, Augusta, Ga., and Lulu Jenkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Jenkins, and Alonzo Smith, Winchester, Va.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Ira S. Monn, Salisbury, Pa. The brides were attired in white satin wedding gowns and white tulle fingertip veils.

Those in attendance were Mrs. Harry Murrey, who acted as matron of honor for her sister, Miss Broadwater, and Mrs. Kenneth Housel who acted as matron of honor for Miss Jenkins. They were attired in pink satin and carried white mums.

The bridesmaids were Misses Bernice and Mable Broadwater. Sgt. Lewis's brother acted as his best man and Ray Jenkins was best man for Mr. Smith. The brides were both given in marriage by their respective fathers. The ring ceremony was used.

Lions Mark Anniversary

Lou L. Brown, Jr., district governor from Washington, D. C., gave an interesting talk at the Lonaconing Lions club banquet held last night in the Community house to celebrate the eleventh anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Malcolm entertained by singing "America Is Rolling Along," "I Would That My Love" and "Hark, the Vesper Hymn." The group joined in the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner" with Mrs. Gerald Paris as pianist.

Father Patrick J. Bradley of St. Michael's Catholic church, Frostburg, who was stationed at St. Mary's Catholic church, Lonaconing, for many years, also spoke at the dinner. The Rev. Lewis P. Ransom, minister of the Methodist church, Lonaconing, offered the invocation.

Guests at the affair were Deputy District Governor J. K. Snyder and Mrs. Snyder of Cumberland, Joseph Trenton, president of the Cumberland Lions club, and Mrs. Trenton, O. H. Rehback, secretary of the Cumberland club, and Mrs. G. H. Rehback. The wives of the Lonaconing Lions club members were also guests.

The table was decorated with fall flowers. The dinner was prepared and served by the Pythian Sisters, Morning Star Temple No. 1, Lonaconing.

HONORED IN COLLEGE

Theodore P. Foote

FROSTBURG, Nov. 10.—Theodore P. Foote, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie T. Foote, Lonaconing, was selected as one of the five students to represent State Teachers college in "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities." Foote was selected on the basis of his excellent achievements and extra-curricular work.

Foote graduated from Central high school, Lonaconing, in 1937. In high school he was president of the Irving Literary Society, won the Tasker G. Lowndes declamation medal, was a member of the debating team, and the winner of a medal for debating.

As a student at State Teachers college, Foote has been an honor student and active in campus activities. He has served as president of the Joint Athletic Association and of the Maryland Singers, was business manager of the college publication, Topper, and editor of the yearbook, Nemaconlin. He is now president of the Student Congress, member of Future Teachers of America, member of the soccer squad, had the principal role in "The Waltz Dream," and is serving on the assembly committee.

Value of Coupons May Be Reduced Ickes Declares

Hitches in Distribution of Books Causes Delay
Until December 1

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP)—Gasoline rationing in the thirty-one states not now under ration control will be postponed from November 22 to December 1, OPA announced today, while Secretary of the Interior Ickes warned that a cut in the four-gallon value of ration coupons in the east may be necessary.

The postponement of rationing in the west and mid-west is necessary because of hitches in the distribution of coupon books and forms over the country, OPA said. Ickes issued an extraordinary appeal to eastern motorists, stating, that unless civilian consumption is cut voluntarily to the irreducible minimum, he could "see no way in which we can supply enough gasoline to maintain the present value of coupons."

Oil requirements of the American expeditionary force in North Africa will be "enormous," Ickes said in his capacity as petroleum coordinator.

Bulletproof Gasoline Tanks

Dear Miss Fairfax:
The other day I heard a radio commentator say something about our planes being safer than those of the Japs, because even if our planes are hit, they're bullet-proof and won't fall. Is that really true? If so, it will relieve my mind a great deal, because my son is in the Air Corps.

WONDERING

The Army Air Corps gives out the information that some United States bombers and pursuit planes are equipped with self-sealing gasoline tanks. When the tanks are pierced by a bullet or shell, the punctures seal automatically.

Indecisive Romeo

Dear Miss Fairfax:
The boy I'm in love with is in the Armed Forces. He's 21 years old. Just before he left he told me that he was debating whether he loved me more than another girl he knows. While he's away he is going to see which one he misses the most. And the winner will be his wife. I surely do admire him for his frankness, but if the other girls gets him, I think I'll die.

I've admired this young man ever since I've known him, and although I'm only 17 I hope some day to marry him. Please tell me what to do.

UNHAPPY

Don't you think this young man is assuming a rather high hand. At the divine age of 17, one is apt to be more in love with love than with a young man who makes such arbitrary decisions.

You say you admire his frankness, but really now how would you like to go through life with such unreserved candor? At 21, the young man's age, we're all apt to believe we hold a first mortgage on the world and the art of living. Grim reality takes care of that. When he comes home from the war, he'll be less apt to hand out such a line. In the meantime, considering you're not engaged to him, enjoy your youth.

Will Tell Him Later

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I'm a boy of 21 in love with a girl of 20, and we hope to become engaged very soon. A few weeks ago she visited her unmarried sister in another city and went out with a young man she met. When she left, he gave her his class ring to wear, and now is writing her love letters which I happened to see. When I asked her about it, she said she would tell me about it later and that this boy didn't mean a thing to her.

I know she loves me and can't understand why she lets this other boy write her love letters. She tells me she doesn't write anything but friendly notes.

UNDECIDED

Why not have faith in your girl friend? She says she loves you. Since you aren't really engaged, each one of you has the right to go out with others.

Hands-off Policy Suggested

Dear Miss Fairfax:
A year and a half ago my only daughter ran away and got married. We had given her practically everything she wanted. I was terribly upset, and my husband took it very hard. She had a wonderful position and was on the brink of a business career; although her firm wanted her back, she wouldn't return.

Three months ago they had a baby girl. They lived in a nearby town, and it seems she never gets a chance to write. Although she used to confide in me, now she tells me nothing. They're both very lazy and I shudder to think of what that child will be when she grows up.

Her husband is in the Air Force and I've just lost contact with my daughter. I've tried to tell her at different times how to systematize her work, but she listens to no one but her husband; he has her "under his thumb." We've found out he lies to her. We will appreciate any suggestion. W. H. K.

Nothing is harder for a parent than to stand on the side-lines and see a beloved child make what seems to be grave mistakes. But a hands-off policy is the better part of parental wisdom. When your daughter has made enough mistakes she'll be glad enough to come to you. Meanwhile, these young folks are still practically enjoying a honeymoon, a time at which no one seems gifted with hard, practical common-sense. Try to be patient.

"In the Style to Which..."

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I'm 17 years old and have one more year in high school. I'm in love with a boy but we can't agree on the date of our marriage. He has often said he would never marry a girl unless he could give her as good a home as the one her father provided.

Do you think a girl should wait for a young man to get her as good a home as the one her father provided, or would it be well to work together to get this home? M. M. A.

You do not state this young man's age. Unless he's a good many years older than you, it's unlikely he could provide a home for you.

for some time to come. It would be well for you to take into consideration the likelihood of his being drafted.

No Longer in Force

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I'm very much in love and about to be married. I have money of my own and expect to inherit more.

Here's my problem. A friend of mine, recently married, was told that her money now belonged to her husband, so she gave it to him. He invested it in his name and whenever she wants a penny she has to ask him for it. I could never be happy under such conditions.

Are the laws the same in all states? Would my friend's husband have to return her money if she asked for it? May I keep my money in my own name, or will it belong to my husband as well as to me?

PERPLEXED

When your friend made over her money to her husband she was under the impression that the old English Common Law concerning inheritance was still in effect in this country. State by state the most unjust of these laws have been repealed, and to the best of my knowledge every state concedes that a woman's inheritance belongs to her.

Hazel Zang, left, demonstrates a one-piece cotton jumper with simple lines and no pockets, designed for safety, easy laundering and smartness. Stephanie Fuja, center, wears one-piece culottes, favored by office workers. Margaret Roark, right, is attractive in a simple two-piece cotton suit, popular with machine operators. The cuffs can be buttoned to eliminate any loose ends that might be caught by moving machinery.

Maryland Presents Karston Show of 1943

The exotic, daring and ravishing Roberta is one of the many unusual attractions in the mighty, thrill packed, record breaking all new Karston Show of 1943, playing the Maryland theater today.

Really five shows in one, this outstanding production features World famed Ziegfeld Follies comedians and sensational beauties; the music of Glenn Miller and Kay Kyser as played by the inimitable Youman Brothers; Gene Gory and His Crazy Band, and a supporting cast of America's leading entertainers.

See America's new glamour star, the ravishing Roberta. Gowned in the sketchiest material, fully revealing the rhythmic perfection of her lissome figure, this vision of ecstatic loveliness creates a picture that will forever linger in your memory.

"Night in New Orleans" Has Mirth, Murder

Chills and chuckles are in the offing for Cumberland! Paramount's "Night in New Orleans" is headed this way, opening today at the Strand theater with Preston Foster, Patricia Morison, Albert Dekker, Charles Butterworth and Cecil Kellaway to make it the topnotch mystery fare it is rumored to be.

Reports have it that "Night in New Orleans" is not the kind of mystery that takes itself seriously. On the contrary, mirth keeps pace with murder at such a rate of speed that the picture is said to be a merry-go-round of laughter and excitement.

The story concerns the rivalry of Foster and Dekker, both of whom are on the New Orleans police force. Foster is implicated in the mysterious murder of a well-known playboy who had been the recipient of flaming love letters written by Foster's wife, Patricia Morison, some years before their marriage.

Foster and Patricia go on a hurried hunt for the real murderer, and thereby hangs the exciting tale. One of the original stagepieces which in wild bygone days made the express run between Tombstone and Tucson, Arizona, and which figured several times in bandit hold-ups, is used in the new Paramount

TROUBLE IS IN THE CARDS

Actual episodes from the thrilling life of Arizona's famed peace marshal, Wyatt Earp, provide the exciting basis of Paramount's new adventure film, "Tombstone—the Town Too Tough to Die." Richard Dix, who portrays Earp, and Kent Taylor, who plays "Doc" Holliday, famed in Western history, are seated at card-table above in suspenseful scene from the picture, starting today at the Strand theater.

The new film, based on Wyatt Earp, famous fighting frontier marshal, also opens today at the strand.

Lum and Abner Film Opens at Garden Today

"The Bashful Bachelor," starring Lum and Abner, opens today at the Garden theater. Zasu Pitts is also in the cast.

The co-feature at the Garden is "The Remarkable Andrew," starring William Holden, Ellen Drew and Brian Donlevy.

"Blondie for Victory" Ends at Embassy Today

As it happens, Penny Singleton is a good housekeeper. As it also happens, she wouldn't help being one.

"The other day," Penny remarked when starting "Blondie for Victory," "I made up a list of all the strictly domestic scenes I have done in the eleven 'Blondies' to date. I last count at a hundred! There were twenty-two cooking scenes alone and scores more in which I did everything from washing dishes to making the beds."

"Blondie for Victory," which ends today at the Embassy theater with Arthur Lake, Larry Simms and Stuart Erwin, is a novel addition

And, while the results are naturally hectic and hilarious, Miss Singleton is fully aware that they also point a moral concerning domestic morale. "Housewives," she thinks, "have a definite role in this war, but first they must do the dishes!"

Consumer borrowing from cash-lending agencies in the United States decreased about one-fifth in the January-June period compared with the like period of 1941, according to the department of Commerce.

Hagerstown Gridders Paces CVAL Scorers

Cianelli Leads Snyder of AHS By Three Points

Davis and Martin of Fort Hill Hold Next Two Places

Eighteen boys, representing four of the five schools in the five Cumberland Valley Athletic League games played to date with Cianelli, Hagerstown high back, the only gridders with more than one touchdown.

Cianelli, with a dozen points, scored both of his six pointers as Hagerstown turned back Handley 19-0 last week. He failed to score as Eddie Semler's outfit bested Martinsburg's Bulldogs 7-0 for its first loop triumph.

Don Snyder, Allegheny high full-back who holds second place with nine points, has the best average. The West Siders conquered Handley's Judges of Winchester, Va., 46-6 in their only league battle and held third place in the standings behind Hagerstown and Fort Hill, each of which has topped two contests.

Port Hill's Fred Davis trails Snyder by one point and is third with eight tallies, followed by Robert "Skinny" Martin of the Sentinels, who sports seven markers.

Snyder, Davis and Martin, along with thirteen other boys, have scored but one touchdown with conversions deciding second, third and fourth places.

Slayden, who became the first player to cross Allegheny's goal line this season as Handley went down 46-6, is the only member of the Judges squad on the list while Martinsburg was held scoreless in two league starts.

Allegheny, although it has played only one CVAL tussle, has the most points. Port Hill and Hagerstown have perfect defensive records with the Sentinels having the better offensive mark with thirty-nine points to Hagerstown's twenty-six. Individual and team scoring records follow:

Jack Zeller Silent On Detroit Manager

DETROIT, Nov. 10. (AP)—Baseball fans will have to wait at least another month to get an answer to the question of who will manage the Detroit Tigers next year.

General Manager Jack Zeller, back at his desk today after a month's vacation, brushed aside all talk that Del Baker would be succeeded by Steve O'Neill, or anyone else. In the first place he wouldn't say whether Baker will leave at all.

Jockey Danny Scooca Injured at Pimlico

BALTIMORE, Nov. 10.—Jockey Danny Scooca suffered painful injuries today when Mrs. R. Feinberg's Rocky Craig, a horse he was exercising, fell on him during training hours at the Pimlico race track. Scooca was taken to University hospital where it was learned he suffered injuries to his wrist and leg. X-rays will be taken to determine whether any bones are broken. The accident marked the third time this season that Scooca has been grounded.

PGA DEFERS ACTION ON OWN TOURNAMENT

CHICAGO, Nov. 10. (AP)—The uncertainties of war caused the Professional Golfers Association to end its two-day session today without making a decision on the fate of its own 1943 P. G. A. tournament until after the first of the year to determine whether the event would be held.

With President Ed Dudley and two other key officers re-elected for another year, delegates heard John B. Kelly, co-ordinator of physical fitness, recommend the continuation of all recreational sports that do not interfere with the war effort.

Remaining in office with Dudley were Secretary Frank Sprogel of Grand Rapids, Mich., and Treasurer Willie Maguire of Houston, Tex.

Maryland Teams Drill for Tough Tests Saturday

Middies Hope To Stop Paul Governali, Columbia's Ace Passer

[By The Associated Press]

Maryland's four major gridiron camps—Navy, University of Maryland, Western Maryland and Johns Hopkins—settled down to hard practice drills yesterday in preparation for their encounters Saturday.

At Annapolis, Coach Johnny Wheelchel began drilling the Middies on an air-tight pass defense, in hope of stopping Columbia's ace tosser, Paul Governali, who is drawing near the all-time college passing record.

Needing 260 yards to tie the mark held jointly by Davey O'Brien, former Texas Christian whizz, and Bud Schwenk, of Washington university in St. Louis, the Columbia stars hope to pick up a large portion of this yardage at Navy's expense.

Athletic officials expressed the belief the game would attract nearly 40,000 fans at the Baltimore stadium as a result of Navy's conquest of Pennsylvania.

Liners Meet Virginia

Meanwhile, the Old Liners of the University of Maryland ran through a brief indoor drill because of unfavorable conditions and got ready for Coach Clark Shaugnessy's promised heavy workouts tomorrow and Thursday in preparation for the forthcoming contest with the University of Virginia at Charlottesville.

Shaugnessy was disappointed with the spotty defense exhibited by the Old Liners in taking a one-sided licking from Duke, and he said their offensive play was ragged although showing some flashes of power.

It will be a battle of two "T's," with Shaugnessy's type and the Murray brand differing somewhat in their execution. However, they are basically alike.

The Terrors of Western Maryland, realizing the power of Delaware, are down at hard work executing plays they hope will snap Delaware's winning streak. Terror fans have shown much optimism since last Saturday's game with Dickinson, because of the bang-up performances turned in by Halfback Art O'Keefe, who gained ninety yards and Right End Bernie Gusevsky, who displayed a good defense job.

Hopkins Encouraged

Johns Hopkins, encouraged by its showing against Susquehanna, hopes to upset Swarthmore, which gave Delaware a real fight before going down in defeat. The return to practice of Jed Goldberg has improved the Hopkins attack.

Meanwhile, looking forward to next year, Cornell university announced that it would open its schedule with Navy in Baltimore, Saturday, Oct. 2.

Bivins Will Meet Savold on Nov. 27

NEW YORK, Nov. 19. (AP)—A ten-round fight between Jimmy Bivins of Cleveland and Lee Savold of Paterson, N. J., was announced today for Madison Square Garden, Nov. 27, by Promoter Mike Jacobs.

The fight replaces the one originally scheduled for that date between Bivins and Tami Mauriello. Mauriello was forced to withdraw from the engagement because of broken nose received in whipping Savold in their recent Garden bout.

A Fellow Named Hunk

One of my favorite athletes for some years has been a fellow by the name of Hunk Anderson—better known as Hunk.

With George Halas, former coach and owner of the Chicago Bears, now in war service, Hunk is one of the head co-coaches left to carry on the job of keeping the Bears on top and unbeaten as the greatest team in football.

His Bears have the Green Bay Packers to handle next Sunday, and after that the Sammy Baugh Redskins in the playoffs. If the Bears can handle the Packers, A Green Bay whipping by the Bears is no sure thing, with Isbell passing to Hutson.

Pound for pound, Hunk is the toughest physical specimen I've ever known, and that includes Joe Louis and Strangler Lewis. As a guard under Knute Rockne, weighing 170 pounds, Hunk made 240-pounders surrender and leave the field. They wanted no part of Hunk, who, in addition to amazing quickness and unusual strength, always has had outstanding fighting spirit.

He was the type they might kill—but never whip.

An Anderson Angle

It takes us back to the time Notre Dame decided to try out field hockey. A big squad had assembled—then Hunk appeared. His presence scattered most of the hockey squad.

"Do you mean," one of them asked, "that I'm to play in a game in which they are giving Hunk Anderson a stick? I don't want any part of it."

As a coach in the old days, Hunk may have been a better top sergeant than a general of the Rockne type, but that still goes as a tribute. He certainly never has had a superior as a line coach.

He was given the impossible job at Notre Dame of following Knute Rockne. At the time this was an impossible assignment.

His Toughest Job

Hunk's toughest coaching job came at North Carolina State some years ago. Hunk had assembled a strong Southern line and a Northern backfield.

"I made one big mistake," Hunk told me later. "I thought the Civil war was over. I soon found that my Southern line was tackling and stopping my Northern backfield before it got started. I'd just forgotten to brush up on my history."

discovered down South you couldn't mix up Stonewall Jacksons and Robert E. Lees with U. S. Grants and William Tecumseh Sheridans and Philip Sheridan.

The unbeaten Bears still have their two hardest games ahead—Curly Lambeau's dangerous Packers and Washington Redskins. This means Sammy Baugh and Dick Todd, plus Cecil Isbell and Don Hutson.

But as Hunk tells you, "We've still a pretty fair bunch left, with Luckman, Famiglietti, Nolting, Galleneau, O'Rourke, Maznicki—and that Bear line."

Michigan and Notre Dame

There may be no national ranking involved, but Saturday's meeting between Michigan and Notre Dame is sure to be one of the best and hardest games of the year.

It has been a long, long time since these teams met. But the rivalry still goes back to old debates and arguments between Knute Rockne and Fielding Yost as to which might win, when both were at the peak.

This game at South Bend has been a sellout for some time back. They are well matched, but Notre Dame will have to show a much better scoring attack against the Wolverines than it had to offer against Army.

Michigan has a strong line, but above all the Maize and Blue has a fine set of backs with such men as Kuzma, Weise, White, Chappuis and others who can pass and run.

I doubt that Notre Dame has a back who can quite match Kuzma. It will take a big day by Bertelli to do it.

In Clatt, Ashbaugh, Creevey, Melio and others Notre Dame is well set up on the side of drive and crash. These are all hard-running backs. But the Notre Dame attack will need more speed and more deception, plus better passing, than it showed against a pretty weary Army outfit.

It might be that Notre Dame was partly under cover against Army while looking forward to this Michigan test. This is quite possible. It is also more than likely that Bertelli will be much better against Michigan than he was last week. He will have to be.

Ohio State also has a hard game with Illinois, while Wisconsin faces a desperate Northwestern team. And Iowa won't have any gentle afternoon against Minnesota, just about due for a quick rebound.

The Middle West this week end will be loaded with action in the stretch running left for the Big Ten or the Big Nine title.

Virginia Gridders Sets Pass Mark Gillette Completed 23 Aerials against W. and L. Saturday

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 10. (AP)—The twenty-three pass completions made by Tabb Gillette of Virginia against Washington and Lee last Saturday constitutes a national individual and team record for any one game of the season thus far, the American Football Statistical Bureau reported today.

The previous individual record was twenty completions, chalked up by Otto Graham of Northwestern against Michigan on October 17, the bureau said in a special report to the News-Leader. The team high total also was twenty, being held jointly by Northwestern and by Baylor against Waco.

The Virginia back's thirty-five pass attempts, which were the biggest factor in the Cavaliers' 34-7 defeat of Washington and Lee, tied a national record for this season by equalling the total tried by Ray Evans of Kansas against Texas Christian on October 10.

So far this season the lanky son of the Courtland (Va.) mayor has attempted ninety-eight aerials and made good on fifty-eight of them for a total of 695 yards. Against Virginia Tech he completed seventeen out of twenty-eight for 170 yards. Those completed against Washington and Lee were good for 268 yards and four touchdowns.

Coach Frank Murray said the use of the T-formation was a help to Gillette, since he throws from what is the fullback spot on most teams and can face the field all the time without having to turn around and fire back.

Jockey "Babe" Hanford To Ride for Uncle Sam

OMAHA, Nov. 10. (AP)—Ira "Babe" Hanford, whose career as a jockey started in Omaha and led him to victory on Bold Venture in the Kentucky derby of 1936, is going to ride for Uncle Sam at $50 a month.

He joined the army here today and will leave tonight for Fort Robinson, Neb., where he will train horses for the cavalry.

Hott, Moorefield, Tops Conference With 41 Markers

Jacket Fullback Replaces Teammate Rodney Bean as Pacesetter

The Potomac Valley Conference's leading scorer will in all probability be a member of the unbeaten and untied Moorefield High Yellow Jackets as Fullback Warden Hott is setting the pace with forty-one points, followed by Rodney Bean with thirty-nine.

Hott, who scored two touchdowns and a pair of extra points as the Jackets routed the Keyser High Golden Tornado 60-0 replaces Bean as the loop's top scorer. Each has scored a half dozen touchdowns with Hott having a five to three edge in conversions.

Another Moorefield player, Keith Compton, shares third place with big John Selters of Romney, each having four touchdowns and four extra points for twenty-eight markers.

Junior Hamilton of Romney is fifth with twenty-six, followed by Carl Keister, Parsons, twenty-four, and Carl Schoonover of Parsons and "Sonny" Harwood of Moorefield, each with eighteen.

One of the two remaining conference clashes will most likely decide the scoring title. In it, Moorefield and Romney are slated to tangle in a postponed battle on Friday, November 20, at Romney. Keyser and Ridgeley will meet in a postponed contest on the same date.

Moorefield has chalked up six straight triumphs this season, three of them in the conference. The Jackets have piled up 138 points while yielding seven. Parsons, which finished its season with four wins in the circuit, scored sixty-three tallies to its opponents' seven. Individual and team scoring records follow:

By JOHN LARDNER

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—This is the first total war in history, but it is by no means the first season of total fanaticism in football. For many years now it has been dangerous even to walk on the same side of the street with a football zealot, let alone question the sacred glory of his team or his section of the football atlas.

One year the entire State of Minnesota boycotted your correspondent because he suggested, in a docile tone of voice, that the Michigan team, which had just been beaten 7 to 6 by Minnesota, was approximately as good a team as the winner. Those words, I was given to understand, constituted perjury, discrimination, malfeasance, barratry, and a foul, contemptible, deliberate attack on the honor of the state and its women, children, and animal life.

Horsewhip Suggested

Some of the boys expressed their conviction that I was on the Michigan university payroll. They did not say how much I was getting per week or per month. If they had, I would have sent a bill of particulars to Ann Arbor and sued the college for back wages.

Then there was the time that a good part of the student body of the University of Texas agreed that I should be horsewhipped. This was because I picked Texas A. and M. over the Longhorns. A. and M. lost. I was the sufferer, the aggrieved party, in the case along with A. and M. You would suppose the lads would leave me to welter in my own chagrin—or, at the most, do a little wholesome gloating. On the contrary, they took it as an insult. The fact that I said they would lose the game which they won enraged them. I could not follow this line of reasoning, but it was easy to interpret the messages I got from Austin, Tex., in respect to what would happen to me if I came there.

One fellow achieved the height of nonchalance in his abuse. He sent me schedules of trains and planes bound for Texas, advised me where to make the best connections, and urged me to be there the following Thursday by noon in order that he might horsewhip me at his "Lose no time," he warned me.

I declined to oblige him. With all us public thinkers, there are certain firm principles, and I draw the line at going out of my way to be horsewhipped. I would not walk a mile to humor the whims of a ruffian.

The names of two of the five best teams begin with the letter "G," soft as in germ. Another of the five comes from a city widely associated with codfish, not to mention beans. On second thought, scratch out codfish and beans and just call it a city. A fourth team has Hibernian connections; better make that Celtic with a whip, club, or cudgel. Horsewhippers must call around at my offices, where they will always find me available for the purpose from 1:30 to 2 p. m.

Nationwide Denouncing

I have been denounced by outraged football fans in New England, the East, the South, the Middle West, the Southwest, and the Far West. If I were on the payroll of all the colleges I've been said to on, the Rockefeller boys today would be emptying my ashtrays and Henry Ford would be grooming my string of polo ponies.

The subject comes to mind because I had some notion today of discussing what is the "best" college football team in the country. Fortunately, I got a grip on myself before taking this fatal step. It would have been pure suicide.

There are polls which name the best team every week, like the Lardner poll. In all of these, the sports editors, be they 45,678.2 or 12,345.6 in number, hide their votes behind a timid but highly practical cloak of anonymity. The guy who expresses an opinion under his own name is just a sucker for a horsewhip, that's all.

Naturally, being on the payroll of every college in the country, I could be expected to be impartial. But it won't work. The best I can do to exercise the old pundit faculty, which is getting rusty from lack of work, is name the five best college teams, and this I will do with a fantastic degree of cunning, guile, and concealment.

The names of two of the five best teams begin with the letter "G," soft as in germ. Another of the five comes from a city widely associated with codfish, not to mention beans. On second thought, scratch out codfish and beans and just call it a city. A fourth team has Hibernian connections; better make that Celtic instead of Hibernian. We must not tip our hand. The fifth team is a member of the Big Ten. It is either Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Northwestern, Ohio State, Purdue, or Wisconsin. Signals off. Let's put that in code. It is either Ill., Ia., Ind., Mich., Minn., Nwtn., O. State, Purd., or Pur., or Pdue., or P - - - e., or Wis.

Try that on your horsewhip neighbor.—North American Newspaper Alliance.

Football Coaches To Meet This Month

ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 10. (AP)—Lieut. Commander Matty Bell, president of the National Association of Football Coaches, said today officers and trustees of the group would meet in Philadelphia late in November to transact business "necessary for keeping the organization alive for the duration."

Bell, former head coach at Southern Methodist university and now athletic director of the United States Navy Pre-Flight School here, explained that the annual meeting of coaches had been cancelled because of war-time exigencies, but that a business meeting would be necessary. A date still is to be set, probably the week of Nov. 23-28.

Succession of new officers and other questions will be decided that time, Bell said.

HAVE EVERYBODY HELP
IT WOULD BE a great thing if you could get every player at the table to help you win all the time. Unfortunately, that is not usually the case. Your opponents are naturally doing all they can to beat you, and sometimes the slips of your partner, in either bidding or play, damage you just as much. But there are rare occasions when each of the four does something to contribute to your success. Then it is up to you to recognize the help which is proffered to you.

South led his diamond K, then switched to the 2 of his partner's clubs, the 9 forcing the K, and the diamond 8 coming back to the Q and A. Certainly it appeared in the beginning as if there also might be a trick lost by East in each of the two major suits, setting him a couple, but it didn't work out that way at all. South led the club 3 to the fourth trick, the J and A going on and the heart 7 ruffing it.

East had now guessed South's distribution—five spades, from the bidding; four clubs from his using the 2 as his first lead of the suit, and four diamonds, from North's having played the 3 on the first diamond and then led back the 8, marking him as probably having exactly one more. If that was right, South had no hearts. In that case, maybe North would help East.

So East ruffed the diamond 4 in the dummy with the heart 4, cashed the club Q for a discard of the spade 4, and led the heart 5. In a fit of dumbness, carelessness, or something, North played low, instead of splitting his honors as he should, and East won with the 10. The heart K, heart A, spade A and diamond J then completed the hand.

Blackout Proves Cumberland Is Well Prepared

18-Minute Test Regarded as Best Yet; 12 'Incidents' Are Reported

Cumberland and Ridgeley are prepared for any war time emergency judging from the results of the eighteen-minute blackout test which was held last evening and observed by the entire State of West Virginia and its Maryland neighbors in Allegany county.

The test, marked for West Virginia, also was observed by Allegany county through special permission of the Third Service Command, and all civilian defense groups were on the job co-operating to make the event, the seventh since December 28, 1941, the "most successful ever held here."

Sirens shrieked the warning to black out at 9:03 p. m., and with a few exceptions the city was as dark as pitch within two minutes. In fact it was so dark in the downtown business section that air raid wardens and auxiliary police collided with or stumbled over each other while performing their duties.

Red Light Flashed at 9:03

Herman L. Meyers, assistant chief air raid warden, reported that all street lights were extinguished one minute and twenty seconds after the signal was given. The yellow signal was received at the local control center at 8:28 p. m., the blue signal was flashed at 8:51 p. m., and the red light came up at 9:03 p. m. The white or "all clear" signal came to the local control center from West Virginia at 9:21 p. m.

The busiest spot in Cumberland was at the control center where the county civilian defense "board of strategy" manned its posts.

12 'Incidents' Reported

Air raid wardens reported twelve "incidents" from various sections of the city and as quickly as they were reported various services were dispatched. The "incidents" were properly marked on the large control panel by Arthur B. Gibson, chief of staff, and the location of each was designated on a large map by Everett Mearns, plotting officer.

The majority of "incidents" were "high explosives" and "poison gas." Thirteen were reported "injured" and one "killed" as a result of "bombings" by "enemy" planes.

Women on duty at the control center were Mesdames Hartzell, Mabel Gross, P. J. Creggan, John P. Stump and the Misses Flavelle, Percy, Vera Paisley and Loreta Kibler. It took three minutes to clear calls to the numerous plants and nearby towns when the yellow signal was flashed, two minutes on the blue signal and four minutes each on the red and "all clear" signals.

State Police on Job

Sgt. Harold C. Carl, of the Maryland State Police, liaison officer for Allegany county, was on the job receiving reports from state police at control centers at four points outside of Cumberland. Trooper A. M. Spioch was at Piedmont, W. Va.; Trooper Graydon Dunlap was at Frostburg control center; Trooper M. C. Hart at Cresap control center, and Trooper C. D. McLane at Mt. Savage control center.

The Rev. Father Francis Montgomery and Dr. William Robert Teeter, assistant liaison officers, were observers at the local control center.

Sgt. Carl said that state police reported "bombings" at Westernport and Frostburg.

W. Arnold Gunther, of this city, decontamination corps chairman for Allegany county, distributed glass vials containing synthetic war gases to test wardens in six city zones and of the five returned all were correctly diagnosed as "mustard gas."

A number of violations were reported and these will be turned over to Chief of Police Oscar A. Eyerman for study, Meyers announced. A third-time violator was reported on.

Chest To Elect Six Directors

Meeting Will Be Held Nov. 20; Committee Nominates Twelve

Six directors will be elected at the annual meeting of The Cumberland Community Chest Friday, November 20 at 7:30 p. m., in the Central Y.M.C.A.

W. Donald Smith, chairman of the nominating committee, announces that the six directors will be selected from the following nominees:

Ralph C. Beard, Charles E. Bramble, Roy W. Eves, F. Lee Fresh, J. William Groves, Nat S. Guggenheimer, William A. Gunter, Charles L. Kopp, Mrs. Somerville Nicholson, Mrs. Karl G. Perry, Henry W. Price and Harvey H. Weiss.

The meeting is open to all subscribers to the chest, each of whom is entitled to a vote for the directors nominated. Additional nominations may be made at the written request of five members of the chest, filed with the nominating committee three days prior to the election.

Draft Officials Confer with Boards

Allegany and Garrett Units Represented at Session

Lieut. Comdr. C. H. Bryant, assistant director of the Maryland State Selective Service headquarters, and Thomas W. Langley, chief co-ordinator for state headquarters, conferred last night with members of Allegany and Garrett county draft boards. Appeal agents also were present.

Problems related to operation of the local draft boards and various matters pertaining to reclassification of registrants were discussed. Lieut. Comdr. Bryant and Langley met with heads of the Celanese Corporation of America's local plant and ordnance plant officials in informal discussions earlier in the day.

Lynn Byrd, clerical audit supervisor at state headquarters, accompanied the two officials here. He outlined to board clerks a streamlined method of filing draft board papers.

Revival Continues While Blackout Is In Progress

Excuses for Rejecting Christ Are Termed "White Lies"

Waves of laughter, then tears and nods of assent was the manner in which another audience in the First Baptist Church, Bedford Street, received the message of Betty Weakland, noted girl preacher, last evening.

Betty—all who hear and meet her call her Betty—has a streak of original humor in her make-up. It is manifested as naturally and spontaneously on the platform before hundreds of people as it is with a group of friends in private. Thus her barbed arrows of pungent truths and attacks against sin are relieved of their hurt.

Speaking entirely extemporaneously and without the aid of notes the young preacher was in the midst of her message when the blackout test was sounded. After cautioning her listeners to remain seated quietly until the all-clear was sounded Miss Weakland continued her sermon without a further break. At the conclusion of her message Miss Weakland asked Mrs. Edwin W. Saylor to assist at the organ and the congregation sang several hymns in the complete darkness.

Preceding her sermon, Miss Weakland sang a solo entitled, "Melody Divine" which is her radio theme song. Mrs. Victor Athey and Mrs. Benjamin L. Moreland sang a duet, "Lord, Come Into My Heart."

Declaring that excuses for rejecting Christ were "white lies," the girl preacher pointed out that "white lies" soon get tan from exposure. "Excuse-making is as old as mankind," she said, "Adam and Eve made excuses and folks are still making them. I have traveled across the continent four times and I have gone from Maine to the Gulf, from Canada down into Mexico proclaiming the Gospel. I have heard many excuses for not accepting Christ but in all my preaching I have never heard a real reason."

"Some folks say, 'I can't be a Christian because there are too many hypocrites in the church.' If you do not accept Jesus Christ because of the hypocrites then you will have to spend eternity with them because Hell is full of hypocrites," as Billy Sunday used to say. But we have found very few hypocrites around the church for it usually gets too warm for them in the church." She added other excuses are: "I don't feel like becoming a Christian; I am unworthy of salvation. No one is worthy and Jesus wants us to come just as we are."

Prayer was offered by the Dr. Paul Henry Packard, pastor of the First Christian Church, and the Rev. H. A. Probst, pastor of the Bethel Gospel Tabernacle.

Reclassification of Registrants Is Based on Civilian Employment

Draft Board Official Announces Thirty-four Essential Industries

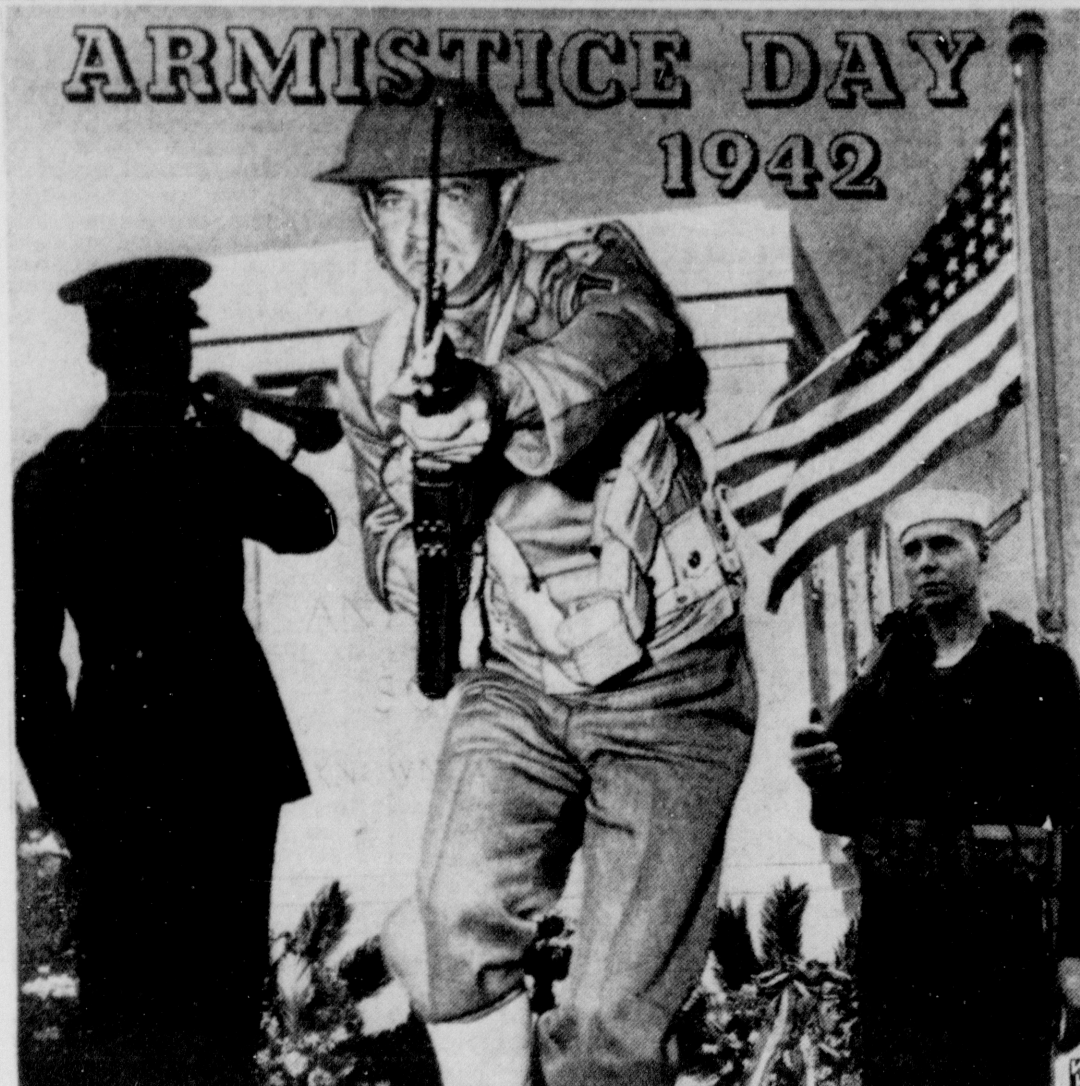

Reclassification of draft registrants based on a list of thirty-four essential industries is underway in many draft boards including those in Allegany county, a selective service official said yesterday.

The list of essential industries was released by selective service officials in Washington.

Married men with children remain at the bottom of the draft list regardless of their jobs, but those with wives only are being reclassified on an occupational basis and they will soon be called.

Called after January 1

However, the chairman of one of Allegany county's four draft boards said Monday he did not believe married men will be called before the first of 1943, possibly in January.

Pan-Americanism Program Will Be Given by Juniors

Ursuline Academy Class Will Mark Education Week Today

A Pan-Americanism program will be presented today by the Junior class of Ursuline Academy as its contribution to American Education Week.

Miss Mary Carmel Flook is chairman of the program which will comprise a series of essays, readings and special music.

Will Present Essays Those who will present essays are Pauline McDermott, "Pan-Americanism—Its Meaning and Significance," Mary Frame, "Christ of the Andes," Patricia Doerner, "Our South American Neighbors," Rosalee Mason, "Our Relations with Latin America."

At the presentation of the flag ceremony, a roll call of countries with flags will be given by Miss Marjorie Reinhard.

Students who will give readings include: Eleanor Gerdeman, "Panama, the Crossroads of the World," Mary Frances Hill, "Pan-American Airways," Cleo Summers, "The National Anthem of Pan-American Nations," Mary Carmel Flook, "The City of Good Airs," Mary Sangiovanni, "Bahia, The City of Churches," Mary Theresa Hammersmith, "Over the Equator," Albert Ley, "A Description of the Panama Canal," Jeanne Lippold, "The Industries of South America," Mary McLane, "The President's Palace," Mary Elizabeth Flynn, "The Lands of Delight," Betty Dressman, "The Customs and Character of the Mexican People."

Talks will be given by Ursula Lindner on "The Quito Pageants" and Jane McMullen on "The Twenty-one Republics."

Talks on Music Listed Mary Kaye Keiser and Kathryn Goldsworthy will talk on the scenery of our neighbors to the south, Helen Carter will discuss the coffee plantations and Barbara Carney the tomb of Columbus at Santo Domingo cathedral. A three-minute talk about the great mountains will be given by Bernadette McKenzie and Henrietta Huff will speak on the music of South America.

The program will be concluded with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" by the class. Miss Patricia Doerner will be pianist.

Class Postponed

A class in first aid for air raid wardens scheduled for tonight at the West Side school has been postponed until Wednesday, November 18, because of the Armistice day parade tonight.

Class Postponed

Married men who have any job in one of the thirty-four essential industries are being reclassified as 3-B, which signifies deferment for both dependency and occupational reasons. Married men who do not work in these industries remain in class 3-A, deferred for dependency only.

The draft of 3-A men, however, will be interrupted to take in the expected class of eighteen and nineteen year olds but it will be resumed when this supply is exhausted.

To build up the army to the 3,700,000 goal set for 1943, the selective service official said, will require all the 3-A men who are physically suited for the army and who do not have children. It also is expected to require a great many of the 3-B men. Drafting of this class probably will start by the middle of next year, although variable factors might advance or retard the time.

Not Permanent Deferment A man reclassified now as 3-B is not assured of permanent deferment.

B. & O. ENGINEER IS INDICTED ON 13 COUNTS OF MANSLAUGHTER

ROCKVILLE, Md., Nov. 10 (AP)—Raymond Rufus McClelland, engineer of the B. and O. limited which crashed into another express at Dickerson September 24, was indicted by the Montgomery County Grand Jury today on thirteen counts of manslaughter.

Fourteen or more persons were killed in the crash, but McClelland was indicted only on counts involving the death of persons whose bodies were identified. Police believe at least one, and possibly five others were on the train, whose bodies never were recovered.

McClelland has been free on a $3,000 bond since his preliminary hearing last month. No trial date was set.

The grand jury also indicted Archie Lee Pearson, 50, of Poolesville, for the rape of a housewife who lived near him.

Rites for Soldier Will Be Held Here

Pvt. Arlington Driscoll Died after Taking Ten Mile Hike

Funeral services will be held Thursday in Second Baptist church for Pvt. Arlington Lee Driscoll, 34, who died Friday at Camp Shelby, Miss., after taking a ten-mile hike.

Pvt. James Dornning, South Hills, Pittsburgh, a friend of Pvt. Driscoll, accompanied the body to Cumberland where it arrived at 12:33 p. m. yesterday. He said that Pvt. Driscoll had almost completed the hike and was within a ten minute walk of camp when he collapsed.

A camp ambulance was summoned but Pvt. Driscoll died before he reached the base hospital. His death was due to natural causes his commanding officer wired Mrs. Josephine L. Driscoll, Pvt. Driscoll's mother.

Dornning, a veteran of the "First World war, marched beside Pvt. Driscoll on the hike and carried his rifle a part of the distance. The men were carrying light packs.

Dornning said. He will remain at Lempereur's residence until after the funeral.

Military rites will be conducted by Port Cumberland Post, No. 13, American Legion, and taps will be sounded by Joseph M. Fradiska. Pallbearers will be members of the American Legion. The Rev. Edgar S. Price will officiate.

Interment will be in Rose Hill cemetery.

Mrs. Harold Weber Dies

Mrs. Betty Twigg Weber, 33, wife of Harold E. Weber, LaVale, died at 7:45 a. m., yesterday in Allegany hospital where she had been a patient since November 2.

Surviving, besides her husband are two children, William and Eleanor Weber; her mother, Mrs. Mildred Twigg, Cumberland; three sisters, Mrs. Vivian Howie, Norristown, Pa.; Mrs. Gretchen Kline and Mrs. Evangeline Coleman, Cumberland; and a half-brother, Lester P. Bell, Staten Island, N. Y.

Mrs. W. C. Soulsby Dies

Mrs. Annie Catherine Soulsby, 71, wife of William C. Soulsby, 240 Elder street, died yesterday morning after a long illness. She was a native of England. Funeral services will be held Thursday.

Charles E. Fraley Dies

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 10. Funeral services were held here today for Charles Ellsworth Fraley, 77, an employee of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

"Y" Membership Drive Will Open Tomorrow Night

Dinner Scheduled for 5:45 o'Clock; Roy W. Eves Heads 100 Workers

The annual membership campaign of the Central Y. M. C. A. will be inaugurated tomorrow evening at a dinner to be served at 5:45 o'clock at the "Y" by the ladies' auxiliary. It was announced yesterday by Roy W. Eves, commander-in-chief of more than 100 workers.

Eves said that the campaign will continue for ten days and it is expected that when the final count is taken the total number of members at the "Y" will exceed one thousand.

Many Improvements Made

Many improvements have been made in the Y. M. C. A. building during the past few months. The gymnasium floor has been refinished to the delight of all who use it and the locker and shower rooms have been repainted and new lights installed. The dormitory rooms and hallways also have been refinished as have the bowling alleys which are in use constantly.

The physical department program has been made fit into today's conditions and the slogan of Physical Director Clifton Van Roby is "Victory through Health." Many new gymnasium classes have been added, including special business and professional men's class on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. More than eighty-five girls from Allegany high school swim in the "Y" pool each Wednesday and Thursday afternoon.

Special Classes Added

Special classes for boys and girls as well as housewives are on the new schedule. Another innovation is the program for night shift workers, who now are invited to make use of the Y. M. C. A. during the daylight hours.

Everett R. Johnson, general secretary, pointed out that many persons are joining the "Y" each week and stated that he felt confident that upon completion of the coming membership drive that the association would enjoy its greatest popularity in many years.

Chairman Eves has promised all workers that tomorrow's meeting will adjourn not later than 7:30 p. m.

CELANESE AND UNION ORDERED TO NEGOTIATE BY WAR LABOR BOARD

The War Labor Board has ordered the Celanese Corporation of America and Local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America, to resume negotiations on wages and give the company and union until November 27 to settle departmental adjustments.

Two closed sessions were held last week in Washington, after the union negotiating committee had appeared before the WLB panel on October 28, 29 and 30. All information presented by the union and the company is regarded as a military secret, and cannot be divulged.

The union seeks wage adjustments, bonuses for men in service, union security and improved arbitration and grievance set-ups. Approximately 10,000 employees will be affected by the decision of the WLB panel.

Number of Auxiliary Firemen Here Must Be Increased, Just Says

The number of auxiliary firemen in Cumberland must be increased at once, Chief J. W. Just, state fire co-ordinator, told local civilian defense officials yesterday.

Four new type incendiary bombs have been developed by the enemy. Just added, and cannot be extinguished by methods previously taught.

Water, should replace sand, Just said, explaining that a solid stream of water from a hose is the best method. Persons combatting such bombs should lie prone and keep the head low, he cautioned.

Information on the new enemy bombs can be obtained at all four of the city's fire stations.

Kopp Starts His Fifteenth Year As Superintendent of Schools

Native of Carroll County Came Here as Principal at Allegany in 1923

"There were eighty-six public schools in the county in 1923, now there are forty-four," Charles L. Kopp remarked yesterday as he recalled the fact that on Monday of this week he started his fifteenth consecutive year as county superintendent.

Under Kopp's supervision the educational system in Allegany county has made rapid strides and while the number of schools have been reduced fifty per cent many new structures have sprung up to absorb the antiquated one, two and three room buildings under the consolidation program.

Kopp produced data to show that in 1928 when he assumed charge there were thirty-six one room, fourteen two-room, thirty-two graded schools with three or more

War Chest Campaign Will Be Discussed At Meeting Thursday

Plans for the War Chest Campaign in Allegany county will be discussed at a meeting of interested groups and individuals Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in the library of the Central Y.M.C.A.

The meeting has been called by Morgan C. Harris, state's attorney, who is War Chest Campaign chairman.

Eighteen members of the War Appeals Review Committee, selected by the mayor and city council last March, and others will be invited to attend.

Allegany county's quota in the campaign will be $45,000, of which $24,000 is assigned to Cumberland. More than fifty per cent of the money raised will be turned over to the United Service Organizations, and the remainder to six other agencies.

Fort Hill Speech Students Present Choric Pageant

Historic and Patriotic Program To Be Repeated Today

Members of the speech and English departments of Fort Hill high school present the choric pageant entitled "If He Could Speak," at the junior high school assembly today. The pageant was presented yesterday at senior assemblies.

Parade To Mark Armistice Day Observance Here

Two Radio Talks Scheduled; City, County Offices, Banks Will Close

Marking the twenty-fourth anniversary of the signing of the armistice at the close of the First World war, November 11, 1918, war veterans and civilian defense groups will participate in a seven-division parade here this evening, starting at 7:30 o'clock from the state armory.

With seven musical organizations in the line of march, the parade will wind its way up North Centre street to Market street to Cumberland street, thence to Baltimore street to South George street and Salem street where it will disband.

Legion Is Sponsor

The annual event is sponsored by Fort Cumberland Post, No. 13, American Legion, will be reviewed from the platform near the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce Honor Roll on North Centre street. Daniel F. McMullen, Maryland Department commander of the American Legion, other Legion and city officials will occupy places on the reviewing stand.

Cash awards of $15 each will be presented by the Legion to all musical organizations participating in the parade. Groups in the various divisions will assemble at 7 o'clock. Thomas F. Conlon, mayor, and captain of Company C, of the Maryland State Guard, will be grand marshal.

E. A. "Bud" Cosgrove, civilian defense communications officer, announced last evening that forty-five new members of the messenger corps will receive arm bands at the state armory prior to the start of today's parade. One hundred boys and girls will participate, he said.

Marshal Conlon announced that the Spanish War Veterans and Girl Scouts, who are engaged in civilian defense work, have been added to the groups which will march today.

Radio Talks Scheduled

William L. McKenzie, commander of Henry Hart Post, No. 1411, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will give an Armistice day address over the radio station WTBO this evening at 5:15 p. m. His talk, one of a series of "Speak Up for Democracy" programs, sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, will last fifteen minutes.

Mayor Thomas F. Conlon will speak on "The Work of the Red Cross with the Armed Forces" at 5:50 p. m., over the local station.

Schools will be in session all day but banks, the trial magistrate court, the court house and city hall will observe the national holiday by remaining closed. The Cumberland Free Public Library, Washington street, and the local draft boards will carry on business as usual as will the local post office.

Veterans To Celebrate

Henry Hart Post, No. 1411, P. M. W., will mark the holiday with a buffet luncheon and dance for members and their friends. The dance will get under way at 8 p. m. Fort Cumberland Post, No. 13, American Legion, will hold a buffet luncheon following the parade in which all Legionnaires are requested to march and wear uniforms or caps.

Workman Injures Finger

Daniel Trexler, 19, 201 Spring street, was treated in Allegany hospital at 10:40 a. m., yesterday for an injury of the middle finger of his right hand, suffered when an angle bar fell on it in the bolt and forge shops of the B. and O. railroad.

Frank Swisher, 47, 338 Virginia avenue, was treated Monday night for an ankle injury, suffered while hunting.

Firemen To Meet

All auxiliary firemen of the civilian defense organization who have completed first aid, gas warfare and auxiliary firemen training are requested to meet at 7:30 o'clock tonight in West Side fire station.

K. of C. To Honor Departed Members

Will Attend Mass in Body at St. Patrick's Church Sunday

Members of Cumberland Council No. 586, Knights of Columbus, will attend Mass in a body Sunday, November 15, at 8:30 a. m., as the first in a series of ceremonies in honor of departed members of the K. of C.
